Fine of $45 Is Meted Out To Zioncheck After Brawls

Legislator Spends Two Hours in Cell as Climax to Court Scene.

Seized in Attempt To Escape Room

Brought in Only When Police Get Peremptory Order.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Amid scenes of wild confusion—from Capitol Hill to a "bull-pen" cell in District Traffic Court—Representative Marion A. (Who, Me?) Zioncheck, battling buffoon of Washington State, was literally hauled before Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday and fined $45 for his 70-mile-an-hour speed escapade and open defiance of judicial powers of the District.

The fine was paid by Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, chairman of the House Rules Committee. He rescued Zioncheck from behind the bars and the pair left in a taxi after eluding reporters, leaving the court building by a rear door.

But his stormy court appearance was prefaced by a street brawl with police in front of the House Office Building; a wanton exhibition of driving recklessness and an hour's session of strong words and shouted demands behind closed doors in the office of a Capitol police official.

His hair rumpled and clothes in disorder, the Western Democrat, somewhat subdued, stalked into Judge Casey's court shortly before the midday recess. He puffed a big cigar and vainly attempted to maintain his composure.

Enters Plea of Guilty.

Flanking Zioncheck and under orders to "bring him in bodily"—were Chief of Detectives B. W. Thompson, Detective Sergt. Leo Murray and Sergt. George I. Hellmuth, Tenth Precinct, who was assigned to serve a court attachment.

For 25 minutes the erstwhile clowning legislator sat in court awaiting his turn at the bar. At times he chatted gayly with Inspector Thompson and at other times appeared extremely worried.

Finally his name was called and a clerk read the charges—speeding in excess of 22 miles an hour on Connecticut avenue.

"How do you plead?" asked the clerk.

"Guilty," replied Zioncheck, his voice booming.

Judge Casey then called the arresting officer.

"Wait a minute—wait a minute, I pleaded guilty," shouted Zioncheck.

The judge said he was "aware of the plea," but wanted to hear testimony.

The policeman testified that he paced the Congressional speeder Saturday morning at 70 miles an hour from Military road to Fessenden street northwest—about ten blocks. He said he sounded a siren, but Zioncheck, in his new, high-powered roadster, paid no attention.

Makes Sure of Gallery.

Zioncheck, acting as his own counsel, repeatedly objected to testimony and interjected to ask questions. After testimony in the speed charge was completed, Judge Casey asked:

"Why weren't you in court Tuesday?"

"I didn't see any need of being here," answered Zioncheck. "I wouldn't come down on that thing you call an attachment and I'm here now only to accommodate a policeman."

As he spoke, the accused lawmaker paused from time to time to make sure newspaper reporters were taking down his words. Judge Casey then called Sergt. Hellmuth, who served the attachment on Zioncheck at the latter's Harvard Hall apartment Monday night.

Hellmuth explained that he didn't arrest the youthful Representative, but allowed him the "courtesy of appearing voluntarily," in court.

A few minutes later, Judge Casey declared a recess, apparently not satisfied with Zioncheck's original notification to answer the speed charge and subsequent service of the attachment.

As the judge started to leave the

Hoover Urges D. A. R. to Help In Campaign Against Crime

Investigation Bureau Head Paints Graphic Picture of Gang Conditions; Session Attacks Bill to Curb R. O. T. C.

Painting a "scare headline" picture of crime in the United States, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, urged the Daughters of the American Revolution, assembled for their forty-fifth congress in Constitution Hall, last night, to "sound a call to arms" to all women's groups to break the "political alliance with crime" and to place criminals and those refusing to aid law-enforcement "beyond the pale of respectable association."

Before his distinguished audience, consisting mainly of middle-aged, gray-haired mothers in evening gowns, Hoover raised the specter of an army of criminals so great that they "would tramp ceaselessly past this hall, hour upon hour, in daylight and in darkness and back to daylight and darkness again though they were 10 and 20 abreast."

"If this body of evildoers could be welded into a unit of conquest, America would fall before it not in a month, not in a day, but in a few hours," Hoover warned the Daughters.

Following Hoover, in a speech more in line with the quiet, conservative temper of the Congress, Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg College, Gettysburg, Pa., stressed that the need of the Nation was "not to break with the past, but to build on the past."

"The passion for change is playing havoc with human judgment," Dr. Hanson complained. "We are throwing into the waste basket things which we will spend tomorrow taking out. In the building of a greater America we never will be able to build higher until we have gone deeper, until we have gained

Puerto Rican Freedom Bill Is Given Senate

Tydings Measure Proposes Insular Referenum on Independence.

By Felix Bruner.

The first step toward permitting Puerto Rico to become an independent country was taken yesterday when Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, introduced a bill calling for a referendum in which citizens of the island will be given an opportunity to decide their future status. The measure, according to Tydings, has the support of the Administration.

Puerto Rico, which was ceded to the United States by Spain in 1898, has recently been the scene of serious disturbances organized by a group seeking independence for the island. The trouble culminated in February in assassination of the chief of police, Col. E. Francis Riggs, formerly of Washington.

Although the Nationalist Party in the island is reputed to be small, and although it has no representation in the Puerto Rican Legislature, recent reports have indicated that, largely through violence and threats of violence, it has become a dominant factor in the affairs of the Territory.

Source of Expense.

While Puerto Rico is one of the world's most important sugar producing areas, it has at the same time been a source of considerable expense to the United States Government. During the last year and a half an average of $1,000,000 has been sent there every month for relief, and last year the Government spent $26,000,000 for rehabilitation following disastrous storms.

The Tydings bill provides that in November, 1937, a referendum shall be held in which Puerto Rican voters may vote on the question: "Shall the people of Puerto Rico be sovereign and independent?" Should the vote be in the affirmative, a constitutional convention will be called, and the document drafted at this convention will be subjected to a referendum. On the Fourth of July following adoption of the constitution and the setting up of a constitutional government, complete independence would be proclaimed. The plan is similar to that adopted in the Philippine Islands, except that the Philippine plan calls for a ten-year waiting period.

In introducing the bill Tydings said it was in line with the present American policy. He declared that recent elections in Puerto Rico have been "disgraceful, corrupt and

Corporate Tax Likely to Delay End of Session

Senate in Mood to Rewrite Measure as Conservatives Balk at Measures.

By Robert C. Albright.

Strong sentiment for entirely rewriting the Administration's corporate tax proposals was crystallizing last night in the Senate Finance Committee, as the House sped action on the complex measure amid a cross-fire of partisan debate.

The Senate Finance Committee took one glimpse at the measure in executive session, sharply questioned Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., and his Treasury aids, then adjourned with preponderantly hostile views, to continue deliberation today.

A committee coalition of conservative Democrats and Republicans, who privately regard the bill as an experiment toward economic adjustment rather than revenue, appeared in the making. A canvass of members indicated there are not now enough votes in the Senate committee to approve it without drastic changes.

Serious Delay Imminent.

With an indefinite Senate tie-up on taxes now likely, and the controversial relief estimates still in a House committee mill, a serious adjournment delay seemed imminent. Following a call at the White House, Joseph T. Robinson, Senate majority leader, admitted the session may run into June, but declined to speculate further.

House members, who quite generally admit their inability to understand the new tax intricacies, listened with only mild interest as Ways and Means Committee members strove heroically to explain the provisions of their bill. Representative Samuel B. Hill, of Washington State, chairman of the tax sub-committee, and probably the best informed member on taxes, made most headway, by constituting the House as a classroom. He volunteered to answer all questions, and succeeded well in answering those asked.

But, despite the importance of the legislation, at no time was a majority present. A log of House attendance during the debate (there are 429 active members), follows:

At 12:20 p. m.—150 members present.
At 1:55 p. m.—100 present.
At 2:30 p. m.—75 present.
At 3 p. m.—65 present.
At 3:15 p. m.—58 present.
At 3:30 p. m.—42 present.
At 5 p. m.—34 present.

Senate Votes D. C. Budget; Battle Pends

$8,600 Added to Bill; Conferees Named for House Parley.

Fight Expected to Delay Passage Until Near Adjournment.

By James D. Secrest.

The Senate took about 15 minutes late yesterday to adopt the District supply bill reported by the Appropriations Committee, together with six legislative amendments, and to send it to conference with the House. It took the House a week to do the same thing.

Adding $8,600 to the bill, as reported, the Senate voted $43,858,720 for anticipated District expenditures, with a Federal contribution of $5,700,000. The measure was passed without debate.

Six conferees were named immediately by the presiding chairman after Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, moved that the Senate insist upon its amendments, which added $1,295,437 to the House appropriations.

Conferees are Senators Thomas; Glass, of Virginia; Copeland, of New York; Nye, of North Dakota; Keyes, of New Hampshire, and King, of Utah. The last Senator is only an ex-officio member of the District sub-committe on appropriations.

Byrns to Name Group.

Speaker Byrns probably will name the House managers today. Even if the full House sub-committee is named, it will fall short by two of the Senate delegation. Its members are Representatives Blanton, acting chairman; Jacobsen, of Iowa; Johnson, of West Virginia, and Ditter, of Pennsylvania.

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, is actually chairman of the sub-committee, but he stepped aside this year in favor of Blanton to take charge of the agricultural appropriations bill.

The customarily bitter and long-drawn-out battle between the two groups of managers is expected this year, and final passage of the bill may well be delayed until a few days before adjournment.

Confident of Victory.

Senate conferees are more confident of victory this year, however, than in recent years as the Senate adhered closely to the Budget Bureau recommendations in practically all items. As a matter of fact, it did not add as much to the bill, as did the House with three new major construction proposals—a police court building, an addition to Eastern High School, and a new Chain bridge.

Even in the item that usually leads to a deadlock—the size of the United States lump sum payment—the Senate this year is on comparatively safe ground. In former years it has often raised the amount for bargaining purposes, but this time it merely adopted the Budget Bureau's recommendation, which has the personal approval of President Roosevelt.

Probably the second most controversial feature of the bill will be the restoration of $87,000 by the Senate for continuation of character education in the schools.

Because the Communistic bugaboo raised by a few members of the House has been attached to this educational experiment, the House managers are expected to fight for its deletion.

The six legislative riders to the bill were adopted without a question being raised as to their validity on an appropriation bill. The foremost of these gives the District Commissioners authority to install parking meters on Washington streets. The amendment states they shall be installed at no expense to the District, but that fees collected may be used to pay for them after installation.

The five other amendments:

Empower the District Commissioners to make enforcement regulations for snow and ice removal from sidewalks.

Provide $5,000 for travel expenses and consultants to the Board of Education.

France Asks That Hitler Clarify Stand

7 Inquiries Propounded for Inclusion in Eden Questionnaire.

Move to Set Precedent; Officials Fear Long Quibbling Period.

By the United Press.

Paris, April 23.—France demanded today that Germany answer seven major questions regarding Rhineland fortifications, restoration of colonies, collective security and the League of Nations before the French foreign office will even consider Chancellor Adolf Hitler's 25-year peace plan.

The questions included:

1. Will Germany return to the League of Nations and remain there if Europe follows the general ideas of the Hitler plan for reorganization and consolidation of European peace?
2. What are Hitler's exact intentions regarding reconstruction of fortifications in the demilitarized Rhineland zone?
3. Does Hitler respect engagements for the integrity of central Europe as defined by the World War peace treaties?
4. Define Germany's colonial aims.
5. What is Germany's attitude toward limitation of armaments, and particularly what are Germany's demands in the proposed western European air pact?
6. Will Germany accept a system of collective security within the framework of the League of Nations, based on multi-lateral regional pacts of mutual military assistance instead of insisting on bi-lateral nonaggression pacts?
7. Does Hitler accept the territorial status quo of Europe?

Submitted to Eden.

The questions were submitted to British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden by Foreign Minister Pierre Etienne-Flandin to be included in the questionnaire which the British foreign office will send to Berlin shortly with a view to settling the Rhineland crisis and consolidate European peace.

In the history of European diplomacy there never has been any precedent for such a questionnaire, and hence Eden's job is most delicate and difficult. However, French officials believed tonight that Eden's questionnaire will be complete and that the answers should provide a clear picture of Hitler's foreign policy.

But there is no definite indication Hitler will reply, and officials feared the beginning of a long period of diplomatic quibbling with Berlin and London exchanging letters asking for clarification of questions and answers.

Collective Action.

Paris has no official indication of what Eden will ask, but the foreign office forecast the following suggestions as likely to be included in the British questionnaire:

1. Is Hitler prepared to give assurance that future treaties will not be unilatefally denounced in the name of German sovereignty and equality of rights?
2. Would the bilateral nonaggression pacts Hitler proposed be within or outside the League framework—that is, would they override the obligations of the covenant or prevent any nations from joining collective action against Germany if the League declared Germany an aggressor?
3. Will Germany return to the League unconditionally?
4. Is Hitler willing to refer the dispute concerning incompatibility of the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact with the Locarno Treaty to The Hague World Court?
5. In returning to the League, will Germany give unreserved adhesion to the facultative clause concerning recourse to jurisdiction of the World Court?
6. What does Hitler mean by divorcing the League Covenant and the Treaty of Versailles?
7. How does Hitler suggest that the nations undertake to end the arms race?
8. Under what form does Hitler conceive equality of colonial rights?

Jobless New Jersey Army Forces Assembly to Return

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., April 23.—New Jersey's unemployed, camping stubbornly in the State House legislative chambers until relief funds are provided, today forced the Assembly to reconvene tomorrow.

Far from satisfied, however, the campers, who have besieged the State House since the Legislature adjourned at 3:30 p. m. Tuesday without passing relief legislation, demanded that the Senate also interrupt its six-day recess. Both Houses had adjourned until Monday night.

"The Legislature, both houses, should be in session now," John Spain, jr., the campers' presiding officer, said. "If the Senate won't come back until Monday we'll stick here until relief conditions get better."

Following Spain's lead, the group voted to telegraph Senate President John C. Barbour demanding that he call back the Senators. Barbour said earlier he would not do so because the Senate could not act until the Assembly, where revenue-raising measures must originate, adopted a complete program.

He telegraphed the Senators to be prepared to remain in session Monday night "and thereafter" until definite action is taken in solving the relief problem.

The ragged, unshaven relief forces, vanguard of what leaders said would be a virtual army unless the Legislature acted soon, held sessions today in the marble-panelled Senate hall after having met for 40 hours in the Assembly chamber.

The group, whose number varies from 50 to 200, was persuaded to leave the Assembly chamber when civil service examinations were scheduled there, but they demanded—and received—permission to meet in the Senate room. They said they would meet in one or the other of the two Houses until relief funds were provided.

At 5:30 p. m. today, after having occupied the Senate chamber for seven hours, the campers returned to the Assembly hall.

The relief crisis resulted from the Legislature's failure in its three-month session to agree on a substitute for Gov. Harold G. Hoffman's 2 per cent retail sales tax, repealed last October after four months' operation.

A "luxury" tax program, affecting cigarettes, amusements and cosmetics, passed the Assembly after ten unsuccessful tries, but lost three times in the Senate. Barbour reiterated today that it had no chance of passing there.

Abduction, 2d Degree Assault Charged to Group in N. Y.

Use of Alias Laid To Ellis Parker, Jr.

Panel Acts Following Testimony by One of Accused Men.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 23.—Five men were indicted by a Brooklyn grand jury tonight on charges of kidnaping Paul H. Wendel, former New Jersey attorney, whose repudiated "confession" of the Lindbergh kidnaping gave Bruno Richard Hauptmann a three-day lease on life.

The men were Ellis Parker, jr., son of a New Jersey detective; Martin Schlossman and Harry Bleefeld, now in custody, and Harry Weiss and Murray Bleefeld, whom police are seeking.

They were specifically charged with kidnaping and second-degree assault.

Immediately after the indictments were handed up to Justice George W. Martin, District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan said:

"This does not end our investigation. It is within the realm of probability that even further indictments may be secured before this case is finished."

Asks Wilents' Aid.

The district attorney said he had instructed police to communicate with Attorney General David Wilentz of New Jersey and ask him to request State police to detain the younger Parker.

The latter was identified in the indictment as "Ellis Parker, jr., alias Al Weiss, of Mount Holly, N. J."

Schlossman, who, according to the district attorney, has already admitted participating in the abduction of Wendel, was arraigned immediately after the indictments were returned.

His attorney, Samuel Leibowitz, noted criminal lawyer, told the Court his client had made every effort to aid the police in the case since his arrest. He said that Schlossman's participation in the abduction was the result of promptings of men much more conversant with the law than he was and that he had believed he was furthering justice in attempting to get the "confession."

Cites Waived Immunity.

He also pointed out that Schlossman had waived immunity to tell the entire story to the grand jury.

Leibowitz asked that his bail be fixed at $7,500 and the district attorney agreed.

Pending arrangements for the bail, he was sent back to jail along with Harry Bleefeld, 62-year-old owner of the Brooklyn house in which Wendel said he was held for ten days and tortured until he signed the "confession."

Justice Martin urged the district attorney to have Bleefeld arraigned as speedily as possible because he is ill and should not be kept in jail longer than is necessary.

Meanwhile, police in Detroit, Cleveland, Grand Rapids and Atlantic City were seeking Murray Bleefeld, son of the elder Bleefeld, and Harry Weiss.

Geoghan predicted they would be arrested within 48 hours.

Complete Recovery Predicted For Survivors of Mine Ordeal

Dr. Robertson Needs Only Rest, While Scadding's Swollen Feet Will Heal, Doctors Declare; Inquest on Magill's Death Adjourned.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Moose River, N. S., April 23.—The two men who survived ten days of agony and starvation until rescued from the depths of Moose River gold mine will recover completely, their physicians were confident tonight.

Dr. D. Edwin Robertson, 53, oldest of three men entombed by a rock slide Easter Sunday, needed only rest and nourishment, first examination indicated. C. Alfred Scadding, 44, was in worse condition, his feet were badly infected and he was flown today to Victoria General Hospital at Halifax for treatment.

Rescuers came too late for the youngest member of the trio, Herman R. Magill. He succumbed to the rigors of their imprisonment, presumably from pneumonia, three days before miners dug through to the men early today.

A preliminary inquest was held over the body of Magill shortly before Scadding was flown to Halifax. Because both Scadding and Robertson were too weak to testify, the inquest merely established identification of Magill's body and then adjourned for a week.

Dr. Robertson rested in the improvised hospital here. He will not be removed before sometime tomorrow at the earliest. Doctors and nurses from Halifax were attending the surgeon. His wife was with him.

Scadding stood the 67-mile flight to Halifax well.

"Scadding's condition is not at all

Italians Bomb Troops Seeking To Sever Road

Air Advance Guard Rains Shells on Ethiopians Near Addis Ababa.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 23.—The aerial advance guard of Italy's army in northern Ethiopia was engaged tohight in a desperate attempt to save the route of a possible victory march into Addis Ababa.

Fascist dispatches reported savage aerial bombardment of Ethiopian troops intent on blasting the Dessye-Addis Ababa road in an emergency measure to halt the Black Shirts' advance.

(Reports from the Ethiopian capital said large sections of the road have already been sent hurtling over almost perpendicular cliffs in the Shoa Mountain region.)

At the least sign of presence of enemy troops, radio observation planes flashed messages to Italian bombers. Roaring through fog and heavy mists, the pilots launched liberal charges of explosives on the native defenders below.

The dispatches described briefly the three-day bombardment of one Ethiopian column between Uorro Hailu and Giafarie, 60 kilometers (about 38 miles) south of Desseye.

Machine-gunned and bombed continuously, this column was reported dispersed.

Squadrons of planes surprised a force of 2,000 of Emperor Haile Selassie's warriors near Doba and inflicted heavy losses. Another group of 1,000 of the Negus' troops were attacked in the region south of Doba.

Official reports from the Fascist field headquarters said the southern Black Shirts in the Lybian division continued their advance, capturing armored cars, a camel caravan and supplies. Another column occupied Scec Hose in the valley of Faf and Curati.

Some military circles in Rome expressed belief another movement

Reaguer Jury Given Letters Of Slain Wife

2 Notes From Mrs. Wood Ask for New Automobile From Undertaker.

Two letters, penned by Willie Mae Wood, Culpeper, Va., wife, to her middle-aged friend, William H. Reaguer, less than a week before he is charged with slashing her to death with his penknife in the Houston Hotel, climaxed the defense of the undertaker in Justice Oscar Luhring's criminal court late yesterday.

Both epistles were written after she had married Herbert Wood, the Virginia State highway employe, gone to Fairfax Station to live with her young husband and supposedly had turned her back on Reaguer forever.

One was dated October 7, the other October 9. The murder occurred shortly before dawn October 12. She was married September 26.

The letters were introduced as evidence, over the repeated objections of Assistant U. S. Attorneys Irvin Goldstein and Cecil Heflin, by Chief Defense Counsel James A. O'Shea and his associates, who are trying to save Reaguer from the electric chair.

Spectators leaned forward in their seats and strained their ears as they jammed against the partially opened courtroom doors when the letters were read to the jury.

Each spoke of a desire to be with Reaguer again. And in each there was the plea for a "new car" so that she might see him. In the last letter she wrote Reaguer, Mrs. Wood said she was "tired of this marriage business."

On October 7 the bride of two weeks wrote the undertaker:

"Hello, dear:

"Came up this morning to get my tooth. Sure wish I could have seen you, but Herbert was with me. I will be able to get to Washington

Honduras Revolt, Fighting Reported

Mexico City, April 23 (AP).—Persons arriving here tonight by airplane from Nicaragua reported a revolt had broken out in Honduras and that bloody fighting was going on.

A strict censorship imposed by President Tiburcio Carrias' government, they said, prevented word of the uprising from reaching the outside world.

One of the plane passengers, Senora Ancta Lagos de Lopez Gutierrez, widow of a former President of Honduras, Gen. Rafael Gutierrez Lopez, reported that insurgents headed by Gen. Inez H. Duenas were advancing upon Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, from three sides.

In the first important encounter, she stated, rebels under Col. Juan Matamoros defeated loyal troops commanded by Col. J. Inez Perez and Col. Juan B. Chavez at Duyure, near Teotecacinte.

The loyal soldiers, Senora Lagos said, fled across the border into Nicaragua, where they were interned.

Van Sweringen Foes Ask Rail Reorganization

Missouri-Pacific Bondholders Offer Own Plan to Reduce Debt.

By the Associated Press.

A new plan for reorganization of the Missouri-Pacific Railroad system was given the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday by a committee of bondholders opposing the Van Sweringen reorganization proposal.

The new plan was submitted by a committee representing holders of Missouri-Pacific first and refunding mortgage bonds. John W. Steadman, of New York, heads the group.

The program proposed a fixed interest debt of $177,867,500 compared with a fixed interest debt of $189,981,859 under the Van Sweringen plan.

The contingent interest debt would be cut from $310,233,284, provided in the Van Sweringen proposal, to $178,311,000.

The commission has been holding hearings on the plan intermittently for several months. Drafted by the Missouri-Pacific management, it has drawn the fire of bondholders' groups, who contended stockholders were given preferential treatment.

Under the Van Sweringen plan, present preferred stockholders of the Missouri Pacific would receive 100 per cent in new no-par common, and present common stockholders would receive 40 per cent in new common.

The Steadman committee proposed to wipe out the present stock and give the holders only warrants enthling them to purchase new stock.

The new plans would wrest control of the Missouri Pacific from Van Sweringen interests, lodging it in three voting trustees who would be empowered to elect a board of 15 directors.

Two of the voting trustees would be designated by the Steadman committee and one would be chosen by the joint action of two other bondholders' committees.

Johnson's WPA Report Sought for the Record

By the Associated Press.

A resolution requesting President Roosevelt to transmit Hugh Johnson's final report as New York Works Progress administrator to the House was prepared for introduction yesterday by Representative McLeod (Republican), Michigan.

In a statement he said, "it has been a matter of common knowledge all along that the entire relief system's foundation was flimsily constructed on the tainted and fetid corruption of the spoils system."

McLeod added that he asked Harry L. Hopkins for the report nine days ago but had received no acknowledgement.

Sacknoff Will Lecture On Home Furnishing

Serge Sacknoff, internationally famous designer, will lecture today at 2:30 p. m. at Lansburgh's Department Store, stressing simplicity of furnishing modern homes.

Ornamental furniture is no longer in the program of home furnishing, according to Mr. Sacknoff, who says that present trends are toward practical appliances for the household.

Roosevelt's Corporate Tax Simplification Plan Appears to Work in Theory Only.

By Franklyn Waltman

WHEN President Roosevelt on March 3 urged upon Congress the taxation of the undistributed earnings of corporations, he advanced as a reason for this proposal the argument that "such a revision of our corporate taxes would effect great simplification in tax procedure in corporate accounting and in the understanding of the whole subject by the citizens of the Nation."

WALTMAN

Since Federal corporation taxes usually create headaches to anyone trying to understand them, we were inclined to believe that any proposal which would "simplify" the subject and cause it more readily to be understood by the citizens of the Nation deserved to have a good word said for it.

What could be simpler than a bill levying a tax of such-and-such a percentage on that part of a corporation's net earnings which it did not pass on to its stockholders but placed instead in its surplus fund? But once the House Ways and Means Committee set to work drafting a bill, it found that the problem could not be stated simply—that the subject actually was a complicated one and that a complicated law would be necessary to deal with it—unless severe injury was to be done to business. It is that way with most New Deal proposals—they are simple only in theory.

But it seems that the Ways and Means Committee has made its 249-page-bill more complicated than necessary—too complicated even for the tax lawyers and experts to understand. For instance, here is what is called the "intermediate formula," taken at random from the bill:

"If the adjusted net income is more than $10,000 and less than $40,000, the tax shall be computed by adding:

"(a) A tax computed under schedule I—For such purpose the percentage which the undistributed net income is of the adjusted net income shall be ascertained by subtracting from the adjusted net income the dividend credit and a tax determined under schedule II or IIA; and

"(b) A tax upon the amount of the adjusted net income in excess of $10,000 at the rate which would be applied if the tax upon the entire adjustment net income were being computed under schedule II. For such purpose the percentage which the undistributed net income is of the adjusted net income shall be ascertained by substracting from the adjusted net income the dividend credit and a tax determined under schedule II or IIA."

And here is another simple little paragraph:

"If the dividend credit is a percentage of the adjusted net income which is more than 71 and less than 86 (and such percentage is not shown in the foregoing table) the tax shall be a percentage of the adjusted net income equal to the sum of 4, plus one-third of the amount by which 86 exceeds the percentage which the dividend credit is of the adjusted net income."

One consolation is that the members of the House, which started debate on the bill yesterday, do not know any more about it than you or I. And even though they will have to vote on the measure within a few days, they do not seem desirous of knowing any more. The largest number of House members listening to the explanations at the opening session was 150—and the group dwindled until it numbered only 34 at the close of the day.

This apparent apathy on the part of the House undoubtedly results from the general impression on Capitol Hill that the bill, now being debated, will not be the measure finally adopted, but that the Senate, as it always has done in recent years, will rewrite the bill completely.

Some Capitol Hill observers believe the Senate may abhor simplicity in its bill and undertake some really complicated legislation, such as imposing a flat rate of 20 to 22 per cent on all corporation net earnings and let it go at that. This would grieve not only the corporation but also the tax lawyers. Even though the latter do not understand the House bill, they smilingly concede that it will be a breeder of litigation and that is what makes fees.

Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, with the assent of the Roosevelt Administration, proposes to let the Puerto Ricans vote on whether they want independence from the United States. It is a stroke on behalf of democratic government—if the Puerto Ricans do not like being forced to accept American relief money—averaging $1,000,000 a month—we shall not insist.

But how Tammany Hall and the Philadelphia Republican machine must envy the insular politicians! Senator Tydings asserts that although Puerto Ricans of voting age total 852,832, there are enrolled 852,904 registered voters. He added that voting lists in cities outside of San Juan show registrations ranging from 110 to 144 per cent of the voting population. There is not any apathy on the part of the electorate in Puerto Rico, and such interest in self-government deserves recognition.

Townsend Aid Admits Income Totals $75,000

Clements Says He Feels No Obligation to Return Funds.

Robert E. Clements, co-founder of the Townsend old-age pension movement, admitted to a House committee yesterday that in a period of a little more than two years he received more than $75,000 from Old Age Revolving Pensions, Inc., and from the Townsend Weekly.

The figures were brought out in a continuation of questioning which had previously revealed that his receipts from the weekly had been $57,500.

In answer to a question by Representative Lucas (Democrat), Illinois, Clements said that he felt no moral obligation to turn any money back or to make any cash contribution to what Lucas termed "this great humanitarian movement." Clements is no longer connected with the movement.

His Income Itemized.

In addition to the money he received from the weekly, cash paid to Clements by the OARP, testimony showed, included $1,915 in salary and expenses in 1934, $5,200 in salary in 1935, $4,897 in expenses in 1935; $3,043 for expenses in maintaining an apartment in Washington, also occupied by Dr. F. E. Townsend, and $2,750 in salary during the first three months of 1936. He testified that he and Townsend each increased his salary in January from $100 a week to $250 a week.

Clements testified he had never contributed any money to the pension movement and pointed out that the Weekly was a private business enterprise owned by Townsend and himself. He had previously testified that neither had invested any money in it.

"Without the Townsend plan you could have made nothing from the Weekly," Lucas remarked.

Clements agreed.

Clements insisted that expense money he received, including payment of his light and gas bill and the purchase of groceries, should not be included in his income. He fixed his income figures exclusive of expenses, at $59,535 from the Townsend Weekly and $9,900 from the OARP.

The witness testified Townsend drew expense money from the contributions of Townsend enthusiasts from the beginning of the movement in 1933 and that he began drawing a salary in April, 1934. He testified that as an assistant health officer in Long Beach, Calif., Townsend had been paid $200 or $250 a month, but that he had lost his job with a change in administration. He and Townsend, he said, had drawn the same salaries and had shared profits equally.

Clements was shown an article by Townsend, printed in the Weekly since the former's resignation, stating that the doctor had insisted profits should go to support the movement, but that Clements had not agreed. Clements said he had heard no such suggestion from Townsend until last February, about the time the House investigation started.

Saw Danger in Wealth.

In the article Townsend predicted that profits of the Weekly would be much more than $50,000 this year. He suggested the profits go into a trust fund for the movement and added that "if Clements and I should become rich our leadership would be weakened."

"It was not my understanding that Townsend felt the profits should go into the movement," Clements told the committee. "I'm sure I didn't."

Clements said Townsend had objected to Mrs. Clements being on the pay-roll of OARP. He said that a niece and nephew of Townsend were on the pay-roll and that a sister of Mrs. Clements had been employed, first by OARP and later by the Weekly.

The witness also revealed that Townsend agreed to make speeches at many Townsend organization meetings only if the promoters would agree to specified financial guarantees.

Art Objects Held Not Iran Property

By the Associated Press.

Mehmet Munir Ertegun, the Turkish Ambassador, said last night none of the "Iranian art treasures and rugs" now being auctioned here was the property of the Iranian government.

The ambassador, who was designated to look after Iranian (Persian) interests after the Shah ordered the legation closed and recalled his envoy, visited the auction rooms as a result of a tapestry investigation into possible duty on some of the articles on sale.

"The furnishings of the Iranian Legation, owned by that government," the ambassador said, "are still under lock and key at the legation. None of the articles owned by the Iranian government is included in the objects at the auctioneer's."

Since presumably the goods were imported duty free by diplomats assigned to this country, the Treasury Department on Wednesday began an investigation to determine whether any were dutiable.

Rep. Buchanan Hopes to Trim Security Costs

Some Expense Will Not Recur in $195,800,000 Program, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

A hope that future appropriations for the social security program might be considerably smaller than the $195,800,000 estimate the House Appropriations Committee is working on was expressed last night by Chairman Buchanan (Democrat), Texas.

For the next fiscal year $23,000,000 was asked in budget estimates transmitted by President Roosevelt for salaries and expenses of the new agency and $15,800,000 for setting up wage records upon which unemployment compensation is to be based. It was the latter item, especially, Buchanan expected to be smaller in the future.

"Of course," he told newsmen, "there is a large administrative appropriation because the Government has to get a record, that is, a complete record of employes up to 65 years. This won't be an altogether recurring item."

The other sums included in the social security program estimates were $85,000,000 for grants to States for old-age assistance, $29,000,000 for grants to States for unemployment compensation administration, $35,000,000 for grants to States for aid to dependent children and $8,000,000 for aid to the blind.

Bringing the total cost to nearly $500,000,000 is a $265,000,000 separate estimate for Treasury old-age pension reserves, and small administrative sums carried in the regular supply bills for expenses of other agencies helping administer the program.

Buchanan said that with the social security estimates in hand he hoped to wind up hearings by next Monday in the big deficiency bill—which also includes $1,500,000,000 for relief—and have the measure ready for House consideration when the tax bill has been disposed of.

The $23,000,000 administrative estimate for the Social Security Board will provide, Buchanan said, for the equivalent of 6,816 full-time positions with salaries aggregating $14,976,000. There would be 2,734 employes in Washington and 4,082 in the field.

Explaining the $85,000,000 for old-age assistance, the Budget Bureau said that at the end of 1934 more than 236,000 persons were receiving old-age benefits in 25 States and two Territories. It also said more than 725,000 persons 65 years old or over were on relief rolls at the end of 1934. If approximately 90 per cent of this latter number, or 655,000, qualified under State plans approved by the board, it said, there would be more than 900,000 receiving assistance at approximately $15 a month. The Federal share was figured at half that cost, plus 5 per cent.

The bureau estimated $290,000,000 would be collected in unemployment compensation contributions. And that 10 per cent of that amount—or $29,000,000—would be needed to cover administrative costs.

The bureau placed the total estimated annual expenditure for 442,536 families to be helped through mothers' aid grants at $157,547,479, with an additional 10 per cent for State administrative costs, bringing it to $173,302,227. It was estimated States would spend 60 per cent or $105,000,000, under approved plans, and that as the Federal share is one-third, its portion of the total cost would be $35,000,000.

Similarly for the blind grants, the bureau said approximately 32,000 blind persons were aided in 24 States in 1934 at a cost of nearly $7,000,000, an average of $20 a month, and that the estimated number in the country was 100,000.

"If 32,000 individuals, in addition to those receiving State aid in 1934, are given blind assistance," the Budget advised, "there will be 64,000 assisted in the fiscal year 1937 under State plans approved by the board at approximately $20 each per month, or a total of $15,360,000 for the year."

The Federal share is one-half plus 5 per cent, or approximately $8,000,000.

Puerto Rico Referendum

fraudulent," and that each of the three political parties there blames the situation on the others. He added that the Puerto Rican Legislature has taken no steps to correct the abuses.

Too Many Voters Listed.

Tydings told the Senate that census figures show there are 852,832 Puerto Ricans over 21 years old, but that registration lists show 852,904 registered voters. Voting lists in the cities outside San Juan, he said, show registrations running from 110 to 144 per cent of the voting population. In San Juan, he said, there are about 75,000 persons over 21, with 73,000 registered voters.

Calling attention to this situation and to the Riggs assassination, Tydings told the Senate that "these facts must lead us strongly to believe that the American system is not functioning properly." Pointing to American expenditures of millions of dollars, he said that "the more we do the worse conditions become."

The Tydings bill would retain military and other Government reservations and the island of Culebra in the possession of the United States. The new constitution must provide a republican form of government, a bill of rights, provision for religious toleration, tax exemption for property belonging to the United States, a public debt limited by the United States Congress, no foreign loans without consent of the United States, the right of the United States to intervene for the preservation of the government and review of court decisions by United States courts.

Freedom in Four Years.

At the end of the four-year period, all United States authority and control would be withdrawn and the United States would recognize the independence of Puerto Rico and invite other nations to do so. During the second year after inauguration of the new government the United States would charge 25 per cent of the usual tariff rate on articles imported from Puerto Rico, 50 per cent during the third year and 75 per cent during the fourth. Puerto Rico would be permitted to collect similar tariffs on imports.

Exports from Puerto Rico, mostly sugar, reached a low point in 1933 of $75,406,455. In 1934 they rose to $85,971,974. The high point was in 1920, when exports totaled $150,811,449. All but a very small percentage of exports came to the United States. Imports, mostly from the United States, amounted to $63,924,883 in 1934.

Puerto Rican financial difficulties have resulted largely from the almost complete destruction of coffee trees in the 1929 storm. The crop dropped from an annual average of 42,000,000 pounds to 7,000,000 pounds.

Boy, 10, Works Free of Bonds, TrapsKidnaper

Allentown Youth, Held for $20,000, Gets Loose, Then Plays Marbles.

By the Associated Press.

Allentown, Pa., April 23.—Ten-year-old Henry T. Koch, who liked to play "kidnap" and "always was the first to get loose, broke a real kidnaper's bonds today and helped thwart an attempt to mulct his wealthy father of $20,000.

Unconcerned, he identified a prisoner as the abductor and went home to play marbles.

A warrant charging kidnaping was lodged against "Richard D. Taylor, of Akron, Ohio," arrested in the outskirts of Allentown within three hours after the boy was abducted while on the way to school.

Police said he confessed. They found four prepared ransom notes and a roll of tape in his pockets. One note threatened the boy's life.

Young Koch, known to his friends

Lured Into Automobile.

as Tommy, was lured into an automobile. The man wanted him to go to the Koch farm to see a colt, the boy said. His mouth, hands and legs were taped, and he was left in a woods southwest of the city while the kidnaper returned to send a ransom note to the boy's father, H. T. Koch, sr., partner in H. Ley & Co., department store owners.

Gamely Tommy wriggled through the weeds until he reached a stone jutting from the ground. He "sawed" with his legs until the stone cut the tape. He found a farm hand who removed the remainder of the adhesive, then he phoned his mother.

The elder Koch had just received the ransom note at his office. Together, the parents drove out the Little Lehigh River parkway where police joined them. They arrested the man identified by Tommy near the spot where the lad was left bound and gagged.

In the police station Tommy wanted to know "how long are they going to keep that fellow in the cooler?"

"Maybe for the rest of his life," a policeman suggested.

Tommy whistled his surprise.

Resents Publicity.

His other interest was conveyed to a newspaper reporter whom he saw taking notes.

"Don't put this in the paper," said the boy.

Asked why, he replied, "Well, I don't like the publicity."

Later Tommy was found playing marbles in the yard of his home where a playmate volunteered the information that they often played gangster and trussed up each other.

Tommy "always was the first one to get loose," one said.

The boy's father was "glad I didn't have a gun because I might have shot that fellow."

When he left the store to get his wife before driving to the suburbs he had stopped at a neighbor's home to get a gun. He could not find one that was loaded, and went unarmed.

U. S. Wives to Get 'Mussolini' Rings

Chicago, April 23 (AP).—Nearly 100,000 American wives soon will be wearing "Mussolini" wedding rings of steel, their reward for aid to Il Duce's Ethiopian campaign, leaders of Italian-American organizations disclosed today.

Between 3,000 and 4,000 Chicago and Midwest matrons will receive their new circlets at one of the biggest mass remarriage ceremonies ever held in the country here on May 24.

Similar rites in New York, Philadelphia and other large centers of population from the peninsula will distribute the remainder of the shipment from the homeland, the sponsors said.

The steel rings bear the name of Italy's chief of state and the date of the exchange of the gold rings which American women relinquished to provide funds for the Red Cross activities in connection with the Fascist campaign in East Africa.

"The rings which American women sympathizing with the cause of the mother land donated, were sold and the funds applied to Red Cross needs," explained Dr. Joseph Quatrone, head of the Banco di Napoli here, and treasurer of the committee arranging "the day of the ring."

Jews' Critic Quits Bay State Office

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 23.—Alexander Lincoln, president of the Sentinels of the Republic, whose recently voiced belief that "the Jewish threat is a real one" caused a storm of protest, resigned from the State board of tax appeals today.

His resignation came as Democratic Gov. James M. Curley was attempting to oust hm.

Lincoln, a lawyer and prominent Republican, simultaneously withdrew his candidacy for the Republican State pre-primary convention.

Concerning his withdrawal, Lincoln declared the people should "know that the Republican Party has no place for racial and religious prejudice."

At the same time, he asserted his reference to Jews, divulged during a congressional investigation of the Sentinels of the Republic, had been misinterpreted.

He charged that, as a result, Curley in a recent radio address had "used language convicting me, without trial, of hate against the Jewish people."

Accused Slayer of Two Is Wounded in Battle

Colfax, La., April 23 (AP).—Walter Johnson, 45-year-old farmer, accused of killing a sheriff and deputy in wrath over cattle-dipping regulations, was shot and wounded in a gun battle tonight near his home. He was whisked away as a group of 200 persons gathered near the scene.

Johnson, wounded in the right arm and right leg by officers who had been keeping vigil around his home, 5 miles north of here, was taken to a hospital in Alexandria, La., 30 miles south of Colfax.

Army Plans Novel Stratosphere Test

Dayton, Ohio, April 23 (AP).—The Army plans soon to duplicate in an experimental laboratory the peculiarities of nature's stratosphere.

In its efforts to eliminate the hazards of altitude flying, it has ordered a "vacuum ice box" as part of the $50,000 worth of equipment being installed in its newly established physiological and biochemical unit at Wright Field.

Capt. Harry G. Armstrong, officer in charge of the unit, said today he hoped, by use of the new pressure chamber, to simulate the conditions of temperature and atmospheric pressure that were encountered by Capts. Albert W. Stevens and Orvil A. Anderson in their stratosphere flight.

The "ice box," to be built of boiler plate, will enable the Army's experimenters to create a temperature of about 60 degrees below zero and pressure conditions comparable to those at an altitude of 80,000 feet.

"We will test the efficiency of instruments at all altitude pressures and temperatures as well as observe the reaction of persons and animals," Capt. Armstrong said.

Zioncheck Pays $45 Fine

bench, Zioncheck suddenly turned and shouted:

"What about my case?"

"I'm taking a 45-minute recess—place the defendant in confinement," Judge Casey answered.

"I'm taking a recess, too," yelled Zioncheck, bolting for the door.

He was immediately seized by court bailiffs and officers. A brief scuffle followed and the resisting Zioncheck was lifted almost off the floor and hurried to a downstairs cell.

For nearly two hours he remained behind the bars, alternately complaining and laughing.

Begins Act at Office.

Yesterday's fast-moving incidents started when Zioncheck failed to appear in court when the morning session convened. He had previously agreed to appear at 9:30 a. m.

"You can tell the judge to go to hell," was his only comment when reporters reached him by telephone to inquire why he failed to show up.

Informed of this, Judge Casey ordered police to "produce his body" before the day was out.

Sergt. Hellmuth went to the legislator's office. There followed nearly a half hour of good-natured joking while Hellmuth waited and Zioncheck posed for photographs.

And then the jesting lawmaker agreed to accompany Hellmuth to court.

Wild Ride for Police.

Once outside, both Zioncheck and the policeman posed for more pictures, the legislator jokingly drawing back his fist and saying:

"You won't take me."

As the two entered Zioncheck's roadster (the now famous speedster), all was serene and apparently friendly.

As they drove off, however, Zioncheck was heard to say:

"I'll take you home—but not to court."

And then things started. Zioncheck drove his car from the curb at breakneck speed. He roared down the street, turned around with screeching brakes and raced back to the corner of New Jersey avenue and C street.

Jamming on his brakes again, he brought the car to a skidding halt and jumped out. Hellmuth was visibly shaken by the reckless, careening ride.

Seen to Strike Sergeant.

Zioncheck started to run into the House Office Building, but Hellmuth was right behind him. He grabbed the Representative and begged him to "act like a gentleman."

"Take off your glasses (Hellmuth wore dark glasses) and draw your gun," shouted Zioncheck.

Hellmuth then seized Zioncheck's belt and started to walk him toward the curb, at the same time calling to a passing taxi.

"This is the time you're going with me," declared the policeman, shoving Zioncheck ahead of him.

A scuffle followed. Some witnesses (there was nearly a score of newspapermen and photographers watching) said Zioncheck struck Hellmuth in the face.

Heated Words Heard.

A moment later, two Capitol policemen intervened and escorted the pair into a guard room in the House Office Building.

There followed a long session behind closed doors while Capitol authorities decided what action to take. Kenneth Romney, House sergeant at arms, was called for advice. He told Capitol police to release Zioncheck and let the Metropolitan officers act as they wished.

Meanwhile, Inspector Thompson arrived with Detective Sergt. Murray. He had been ordered to the "battle scene" by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

During the closed door session, heated words interspersed with much profanity echoed into the office building corridors.

Threat to Sue Police.

Things were finally straightened out and Zioncheck agreed to peaceably accompany the officers to court. He was driven away in a headquarters car.

Before leaving, however, he insisted he was going to sue the police department for false arrest and was "acting as an ordinary citizen."

During Sergt. Hellmuth's testimony in court, he told Judge Casey that Zioncheck had said he "would never come to court."

But when the cocky legislator found himself behind cell bars, he quickly invoked his Congressional immunity and demanded to call Speaker Byrns.

Complains About Cell.

But Speaker Byrns said it would require a special House resolution to order Zioncheck's release.

While languishing in the court cell block, Zioncheck told reporters he was being "detained unlawfully."

"How can I represent my constituents and be in jail at the same time?" he mumbled.

Informed Judge Casey had gone to lunch, Zioncheck said:

"I guess he has gone out to get some legal advice—probably over seeing his friend, J. Edgar Hoover."

After lunch, Zioncheck (who didn't get a thing to eat) was again called before Judge Casey. The judge asked him what he meant by his actions before the recess.

Court's Reprimand.

"I started to leave in an orderly manner," replied the lawmaker.

"On the contrary, I find you disregarded the court's order and proceeded to leave in anything but an orderly manner," said Judge Casey. "The court is not prepared to overlook your conduct."

At this point, Judge Casey imposed a $20 fine for contempt of court, in lieu of which Zioncheck was ordered to spend 48 hours in jail. On the speed count, Judge Casey fined him the maximum—$25. This was in addition to $25 collateral which Zioncheck forfeited by his failure to appear.

The judge said he would give Zioncheck the benefit of the doubt about the original court summons.

"I also find there is some doubt about the way the attachment was served. You are entitled to that doubt, too," said Judge Casey.

After the fine and Judge Casey's lecture, Zioncheck appeared completely subdued. He even lowered his head and looked ashamed. He said:

"I guess I got a trifle excited—I'm apt to do that on occasions. You see, I was born on a stormy day."

Later, when reporters approached Representative O'Connor and asked why he had "rescued" Zioncheck, he laughingly replied:

"That wasn't me—that was my double."

School Ducking One Zioncheck Episode in West

Incurred Seniors' Wrath; Judge Later Warned Him of Contempt.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, April 23.—A duckling in the "froshpond" while president of the University of Washington student body was one of many turbulent experiences in the life of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck (Democrat), Washington, blonde and pugnacious Seattle member of Congress.

His wrangle with Washington, D. C., police today over a speeding charge is the latest.

Elected student body president nine years ago by a majority of 51 votes, his policies so aroused the ire of some upper classmen on the campus they dumped him in the pond used for hazing freshmen.

A few months after he was admitted to Federal court practice, Judge Curtis D. Wilbur advised him that only his youth and a prompt apology saved him from a contempt fine because he accused the circuit court of appeals of leaning toward "shanghaiing citizens."

Two months later he was found in contempt by a superior court judge who said he insulted a witness.

He joined with other liberals in a successful fight to recall Mayor Frank Edwards in 1931 because Edwards had discharged J. D. Ross, Seattle City light superintendent, now a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

He was unofficial attorney for the Unemployed Citizens League in the days before the Federal Government stepped into the relief picture.

$69,500 Slash In Mullen's Fee Made by Ickes

Official Limits Payment to $20,000; Secretary's Power Questioned.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes yesterday scaled down the $89,500 requested by Arthur Mullen for legal services with the Platte and Loup Rivers power projects in Nebraska to $20,000.

At the same time, the PWA administrator, who had held up the former Democratic national committeeman's fees for months, warned the Platte Valley Authority that regardless of a suit brought against it by Mullen, PWA would not pay more than $10,000.

In a similar letter to the Loup Power District, Ickes said he would pay $10,000 instead of the $40,000 asked by Mullen.

Commenting on Mullen's suit against the Platte Valley for $49,500, Ickes said it had "the appearance of a collusive suit—that's the reason I wrote them."

The Platte Valley previously had approved Mullen's $49,500 fee and Ickes said "probably they won't feel like defending it and he has a fair chance of getting a judgment."

Once the judgment was rendered, Ickes added, the Platte Valley would have to pay it.

Ickes said Mullen at first had asked $175,000 for his work as attorney for the two projects, but explained that part of it was to pay for future services and that the request had "simmered" down to $89,500.

Ickes said he had at first offered Mullen $5,000 for each project, but indicated this was for bargaining purposes.

Denies Ickes Power.

Omaha, Nebr., April 23 (AP).—Arthur F. Mullen, Omaha attorney, today said "Secretary Ickes has no power to pass on the amount of fees due me," when informed that Ickes had cut Mullen's fee for $89,500 for services rendered two Nebraska PWA-financed public power and irrigation districts to $20,000.

"He did not employ me and I have never rendered any service to him," said Mullen. "Secretary Ickes has nothing whatever to do with the amount of fees due me. That will be settled by the projects themselves and by the courts of Nebraska."

Mullen has filed suit in District Court at North Platte for $49,500 from the Platte Valley Public Power and Irrigation District, one of the two districts involved, and is planning to file suit at Columbus, Nebr., probably tomorrow, for $40,000 from the Loup River Public Power and Irrigation District.

Spain 'Red Guard' Jails Three Girls

Corunna, Spain, April 23 (AP).—A group calling itself the "Red Guards" seized the towns of Boiro and Ribeira tonight and set patrols in the streets.

At Ribeira, they placed three girls in the town jail. Some persons also were held at Boiro.

An agent for the tobacco monopoly at Corunna was nearly lynched when he tried to arrest a smuggler who cried for help, shouting "this man is a Fascist." The agent took refuge in his home, and civil guards prevented an angry mob from raiding the house.

Communists in the town of Puebla Del Caraminal staged a demonstration after authorities had released from jail eight persons who had been found to be not Fascists, as was charged. The authorities placed them back in jail again in order to still the disturbance.

Soviet Seeks High Lane For Air Route to U. S.

Moscow, April 23 (AP).—Soviet scientists in session to discuss stratosphere explorations turned their attention tonight to a warm high altitude lane which they hope can be used for aerial travel to America.

Prof. P. A. Molchanoff said there is no doubt the Arctic provides better high flying possibilities than the temperate zones.

A warm layer of air, he declared, above two kilometers (1.24 miles) removes the danger of ice formation on the wings of a plane—one of the greatest drawbacks in Arctic flying. To obtain the same conditions that prevail at that altitude in the Arctic, a flier would have to climb to 5 kilometers (3.10 miles), the professor asserted.

Mystery Death In 1930 Is Laid To Liquor Gang

Bootleggers Raised $1,000 to Kill Federal Agent, Official Believes.

By the Associated Press.

Santa Fe, N. Mex., April 23.—A bootlegging gang which raised a $1,000 "murder fund" was blamed tonight for the disappearance six years ago of a Federal prohibition agent as New Mexico State police abandoned a search which yielded the bones of two human beings.

Chief E. J. House, jr., of the State constabulary, revealed for the first time his reconstruction of a crime which may never have a sequel in court—the slaying of Agent Ray Sutton.

Lack of a "corpus delicti," Chief House declared, is the vital circumstance which may forever keep from justice the men he believed conspired to do away with an officer who was "too conscientious in duty."

The "Devil's Washbasin," an isolated little pool in the northeast corner of New Mexico, yielded slender evidence—three footbones, a kneecap, some hand bones and a vertabra.

Because they cannot be identified more conclusively, the bones will never stand as evidence in a courtroom, but Chief House felt certain they were those of Sutton and another man, possibly a resident of the area who disappeared about 1927.

"We had our net spread," said House. "We were ready to arrest the several men who contributed to a pot to pay the killers of Ray Sutton, along with the remaining one of the actual killers alive today."

He pieced together, from reliable informants, a story of how bootleggers in the sparsely settled region raised a fund of $1,000 as a reward for Sutton's death.

The prohibition agent left his home at Raton, N. Mex., late in August, 1930. He never was seen again. His blood-stained car was found later in a hidden box canyon. His last pay check was cashed in Colorado, over an apparently forged signature.

Chief House was informed three men did the actual killing and that two of them are dead.

Bridge Proposed In Honor of Howe

Boston, April 23 (AP).—Lieut. Gov. Joseph L. Hurley proposed to President Roosevelt today that a $2,000,000 bridge be constructed between Fall River and Somerset as a memorial to Louis McHenry Howe, late Presidential adviser.

The President went to Fall River yesterday to attend burial services of Howe, who lived in that city for many years. Hurley was formerly Mayor of Fall River.

State engineers have submitted to Washington for approval plans for the structure across the Taunton River. It would be built with Federal and State funds.

Hurley telegraphed the President: "* * * I know how well you appreciate the great desire entertained by our late friend Louis McHenry Howe for a new bridge over the Taunton River. * * *

"May I suggest that his wishes might well be carried out and a great public need satisfied by the erection at Fall River of the Louis McHenry Howe Memorial Bridge, where all who pass may forever remember his unselfish devotion to this country?"

Death Certificate Forged by Veteran

Beaumont, Tex., April 23 (AP).—Sherley B. Cockrell, 37, of Logansport, La., World War veteran, pleaded guilty before United States Commissioner Fred J. Faust here today to forging his own death certificate and "cashing in" on his adjusted compensation.

Government witnesses said Cockrell intercepted a claim check of $645.85, made out to the defendant's mother, Mrs. Sallie Burnett.

L. J. Williams, Secret Service agent, said Cockrell told him he was angered when Congress failed to pass the bonus bill in 1934, and decided to get some of the $1,582 "coming to him" on his adjusted service certificate.

Williams said Cockrell related forging a fictitious physician's name to his death certificate and of having the San Augustine County clerk innocently attest it.

Britain Fights To Aid Doomed Subject in U. S.

Officials' Kidnaper One of 2 Condemned to Hang on Coast Today.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, April 23.—The British government and a squad of attorneys pressed separate fights tonight to stay the hanging of Alexander Mackay, a British subject, condemned with Joseph Kristy to die on the gallows tomorrow for kidnaping the California Prison Board.

Both men are San Quentin convicts.

Britain's foreign office sent through the Secretary of State in Washington a request to Gov. Frank F. Merriam that the double execution be delayed 30 days to allow attorneys to appeal the case if warranted.

Harding J. McGuire and Melvin M. Belli, attorneys for the two men, contacted individually the justices of the State supreme court in an attempt to get approval for a writ of review.

Three of the justices visited indicated they would not act. That meant McGuire and Belli would have to obtain approval from the other four justices.

The British goverment took cognizance of Mackay's case after Neil MacLean, Labor member of Parliament, started a move in his behalf on the contention the condemned man should not be required to pay with his life for participation in the sensational kidnaping.

Mackay and Kristy were convicted of slugging Warden James B. Holohan and kidnaping three prison board officials in an escape from San Quentin with two other convicts. A posse overtook them as they fled in an official automobile.

One convict was killed. Mackay, Kristy and the other convict surrendered.

The two condemned men were sentenced under a recent State law which provides death in kidnaping cases in which the victim has been harmed.

Once previously the British foreign office interceded for Mackay. Attorneys obtained a State Supreme Court recommendation upon which Merriam reprieved the two men for 90 days. During the interim the United States Supreme Court declined to consider the case.

The State Supreme Court already has sustained the conviction.

Colorado Extends Border Blockade

Denver, Colo., April 23 (AP).—The National Guard announced tonight that Colorado's military border blockade against "cheap labor" would be maintained until late in the fall—even as a threat of "reprisals" came from a neighboring State.

The announcement by Maj. William Perry, in command of guardsmen on the New Mexico border, followed a warning from Gov. Clyde Tingley of New Mexico:

"If Colorado is going to take a high-handed attitude in the matter, New Mexico will do the same thing.

"We'll stop every truck bringing shipments into New Mexico and forcing truckers to unload New Mexico shipments before they enter Colorado."

Gov. Ed C. Johnson of Colorado, who ordered the border closed to "indigent and alien labor" last Saturday, made no comment on Tingley's declaration.

Maj. Perry reported 422 persons have been prevented from entering Colorado from New Mexico and Oklahoma since Monday. He declared the blockade will continue until the sugar beet harvest season, late in the fall.

Austrian Jews Recruit Legion to Fight Arabs

Vienna, April 23 (AP).—Recruiting of a Jewish legion, designed to fight Arabs, if necessary, in Palestine, was started today in Austria and some neighboring countries. In Vienna 163 volunteers were accepted, and two battalions were planned.

The immediate purpose of the legion was to aid Jews in Palestine, where there has been rioting recently between the Jewish and Arab populations, but a permanent force to fight suppression of Jews anywhere was contemplated. Plans for such a force were laid down at the constituent congress in Vienna last September of the new Zionist organization.

serious. Doctors at the Halifax hospital said after examining him. "He is suffering from badly swollen feet, and we are afraid of trench foot, but his physical condition otherwise is excellent. Mentally, he is in fine shape. His complete recovery appears a certainty."

Halifax hospital authorities said Dr. Robertson would be flown there tomorrow for a thorough examination.

Witnesses at the Magill inquest were Herbert McDougall, who accompanied the trio into the mine April 12, but returned to the surface before the cave-in; F. H. Henderson, mine manager, and Dr. Leonard Davidson, Hairk physician. The inquest was conducted by Daniel Reid, Middle Musquedoboit merchant, with M. Higgins, Moose River storekeeper, as jury foreman.

Rescued at 12:44 a. m.

Heroic miners completed their part of the rescue, after days of frantic tunneling at constant risk of their own lives, at 12:44 a. m. The rest was up to the doctors.

Robertson and Scadding were dirty, emaciated and bearded. The doctor proudly walked from the shaft, so weak he tottered, but with a smile and a cheery wave. Scadding was carried out because of his feet, but he, too, smiled weakly and waved his hand as they were taken to warm hospital beds. They slept only about two hours, their nervous reaction was so great.

Mine officials were forced to board up the entrance to the treacherous Reynolds sloping shaft, which was extended by miners crawling on their stomachs to reach the entombed men. This was to prevent souvenir hunters from entering it and imperiling their lives. Almost everything movable was snatched by hundreds of sightseers who descended on this little mining village.

Later a dynamite charge will be set off in the shaft to close it permanently and remove the risk to life.

The little settlement of 15 houses was fast returning to normal existence. The little lake nearby, dotted for days by amphibian planes that brought reporters, photographers and doctors in, was almost clear again. But the villagers never will forget the ten-day struggle to rescue the men from the old mine.

Fugitive Freed As Reformed Life Is Pictured

Man, Who Walked Away, From Prison and Made Good Wins Parole.

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, April 23.—Robert Hayes, 31, his slight shoulders squared, today walked out of the city jail free to go back to his wife and baby and job, leaving behind the man he was—Carl Gratz, an escaped Ohio convict.

"My wife and I," he said, "we'll just forget there ever was a man named Carl Gratz. He's dead; that's it, he's dead to us at last."

In December, 1930, Carl Gratz, an Ohio Reformatory "trusty" sentenced to serve from 1 to 15 years for assault with intent to commit robbery in Lucas County, Ohio, "walked away" from the reformatory and became Robert Hayes, fugitive. He had served thirteen and one-half months of his term.

Yesterday Special Agent Frank Moorhead received a "tip" where a man whose record had been on file with officers here six years, could be found.

But Moorhead, before he wired Ohio Reformatory Superintendent Arthur L. Glattke, took the trouble to check up on his prisoner. He found Hayes never had been in trouble here, had worked hard, was respected by his employer.

All this he telegraphed Glattke. With Glattke's reply he went to the jail.

"I guess it's no use," said captured-fugitive Hayes. But if they'd just give me a parole. I'd do anything. I'd report to you every night. I'd——.

Moorhead interrupted:

"You've got a parole, Hayes, a sort of unofficial parole. Ohio authorities say they are short of funds and that since you've made good and have a wife and baby they won't send for you."

'Inaccuracies' In FCC Inquiry Cited by Hurd

A. T. & T. Counsel Charges Evidence at Hearing Was 'Misleading.'

The evidence thus far presented in the investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. is "grossly inaccurate and misleading and unfair," charged G. F. Hurd, special counsel for the corporation, at yesteray's hearing before the Federal Communications Commission.

Samuel Becker, special F. C. C. counsel, who has been interrogating a long list of telephone officials for the past eight weeks on details of operations, immediately asked Hurd for instances of inaccuracy.

Hurd said he could not give any offhand, as he had not had time to read the reports, but would like an opportunity for "reasonable cross-examination" of witnesses and for introduction of A. T. & T. prepared exhibits in rebuttal.

At the close of the morning session yesterday, Hurd, a tall, tanned, well groomed man with a booming voice, asked the commission for permission to make a statement. Chairman Paul A. Walker insisted on the luncheon recess, but advised Hurd to speak to Becker during that time.

Criticizes Methods.

Instead, Hurd gathered newsmen in the corridor outside and criticized the investigation's methods and evidence, reiterating his statements when Commissioner Walker let him speak for the record at the beginning of the afternoon session.

Testimony during the morning and part of the afternoon came from John H. Bickley, chief accountant of the investigation, with Becker examining him. Acting in a dignified version of what vaudeville lovers know as "stooge" and "gagman," the two rapidly sketched the historical background behind the rates charged consumers for the use of telephones.

To do this they showed that after the A. T. & T. had collected huge profits from the operating companies in the rental of telephone instruments over a period of more than a quarter-century, the corporation sold the associate and operating companies the equipment in 1927 at an additional profit of $14,000,000.

This sale was made at the very time the hand-set type of telephone had been made entirely practical, so the subsidiary and participating companies bought the rights to outmoded equipment, according to the evidence brought out by Bickley and Becker.

Bickley, skilled accountant, with a long record of public service in utility investigations, had prepared charts and reports on the financial structure of the A. T. & T., from which he read scores of figures into the record, showing:

Profits Cited.

That the company had realized profits on rental of telephone instruments to operating companies from 1902 to 1927 ranging from $50,000,000 to $216,000,000 in excess of a 6 per cent investment. The exact sum of excess profits could only be arrived at through various indices chosen according to what factor was to be studied, he said.

That "growing public criticism" of rental charges, as evidenced by numerous rate cases and inquiries by many State utility commissions, and the introduction of the cradle-type telephone set motivated the sale by the A. T. & T. of its equipment to the operating companies.

That the new type of telephones threatened to make older instruments obsolete, and so "the A. T. & T. disposed of its outmoded instruments and passed on to the buyers the risk of obsolescence."

That the total sale price of $38,000,000 "was fixed by the seller which controlled the buyers."

That the transaction "enriched the American company at the expense of its subsidiaries and their patrons to the extent of over $14,000,000," and that "the associated companies then proceeded to recover from their patrons, through depreciation charges, the profit which they had delivered to the company controlling them."

Disputes Findings.

President Walter S. Gifford, who took the stand in the late afternoon, disputed the findings of Bickley in his long search through the company's records, saying that the company had not realized any financial advantages from the instrument sale, and that he could not agree that excessive profits had been made from rentals.

The instrument sale, he testified, resulted in $17,000,000 annual savings to the operating company, sufficient to pay the entire purchase price of the equipment over a period of two and one-half years.

He admitted, however, that he was not thoroughly familiar with the details of the company's history as presented by Bickley.

Hoover Urges D. A. R. to Help In Crime Fight

Investigation Bureau Head Paints Graphic Picture of Gang Conditions.

from the past clearer vision and stronger faith. The way out of the confusion of today lies in following the Constitution—not forsaking it."

In a resolution adopted at the morning session the Daughters reaffirmed their stand in favor of teacher loyalty oaths, but went on record that "this pledge of loyalty should in no way infringe upon the prerogative of educators to determine subjects of study, but should be directed toward the elimination of teachers who are opposed to our constitutional form of government."

Nye-Kvale Bill Opposed.

The wording of the qualification was generally interpreted as meaning that the D. A. R. was not opposed to the teaching of the facts about Communism—and favors the stand of Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and the Board of Education on the controversy over the pending Sisson bill to repeal the "little Red rider."

It was recalled that the recent convention of the District of Columbia Chapter of the D. A. R., the national defense committee studiously avoided any mention of the Sisson bill, but went on record as favoring the "teaching of the facts of communism."

The Daughters also approved resolutions favoring the McCormack disaffection bill and the Disney bill to establish a National Academy of Public Affairs for the training of statesmen, and opposing the Nye-Kvale bill that would "cripple the Reserve Officers Training Corps."

The regulation of child labor and of adult working hours was a matter for the individual States to determine the congress decided, and members were urged "to oppose legislation in Congress that would give to the Federal Government the power to regulate and control the labor of individuals." Opposition also was voted to "any amendment to the Constitution which would result in a change in our form of government."

Favor Merchant Marine.

The proposed Capper amendment to exclude aliens from the count in apportioning of representation in the House of Representatives also was approved by the Daughters, as were resolutions favoring an "American" merchant marine by requiring "ships receiving any Federal aid to employ only American-born or completely naturalized seamen," and a more restrictive immigration and alien policy.

A proposal to amend the Constitution to give "the courts the power to take away the rights of citizenship to those proving unworthy of such rights," made in a speech to the Congress by Felix Forte, the educator, was vigorously applauded by the Daughters.

"There are today 150,000 murderers roaming at large," Hoover told his audience.

"Statistics show that during the lifetime of those who form our population, nearly a quarter of a million persons will commit murder before they die, and more than 300,000 persons will be murdered.

"Think of the scare heads concerning the tempestuous floods which ravaged our Eastern States only a month ago. If all this death, desolation and ruin were magnified to double proportions, it would not even approach the horrible picture the corpses representing the 300,000 citizens of America who today are walking the streets in the belief of security, making their plans, dreaming their dreams of the future, and not realizing that they are doomed to die by the foul hand of the murderer."

Political Alliances Charged.

"Political alliance with crime exists in State after State, municipality after municipality. It halts the law enforcement officer, even as he reaches for his gun and holds him there a target for the bullets of the coward he has been attempting to arrest. It stalks into our courts, brushing aside indictments, trials and even convictions. It enters our penitentiaries, swinging wide the heavy prison gates. It supports bribery, perjury and gangdom, and has been known to place more than one former convict upon the force of a police department.

A loud "oh" swept the audience as many of them exchanged glances, a reaction that was repeated when Hoover charged that "throughout our country law enforcement has been hampered, hamstrung and strangled by the blood-caked hand of crime-affiliated politics."

"Political grafters stir uneasily when honorable citizens like yourselves begin to ask questions about the close connection between violent crime and crooked politics. They do not like honest law enforcement and they do not like the truth, which is that they are the brains behind the Dillingers of this land. If we wait upon the medical quacks, parole panderers and misguided sympathizers with habitual criminals to protect our lives and property from the criminal horde, then we must also resign ourselves to increasing violence, robbery and sudden death.

"It is inconceivable that a country should be run so loosely that even former convicts, still maintaining their allegiance with the underworld can be elected to office.

"I have said before and I say again that if every incumbent of public office in the United States were fingerprinted and the records of the law violators spread before the Nation in a single summary, the results would amount to a scandal that would rock the country.

"The only remedy for this condition can come about through concerted efforts of organizations which are not afraid to make the life of every public official the open and clean book which this country deserves to possess in its library of public service. The time has come to insist that there can be no compromise with crime.

"As guardians of patriotism, you should watch appropriations and view with keen suspicion the various so-called economy moves by which venal politicians disrupt police departments."

Suggesting what would virtually amount to a boycott of criminals and of those refusing to aid law-enforcement agencies, Hoover said:

"Neither I nor any member of the Federal Bureau of Investigation will knowingly have business relationships with a person whom we know to be deliberately fostering crime by refusing to aid law enforcement. If it becomes known that such patriotic organizations as the D. A. R. place such persons beyond the pale of reputable association, then perhaps tongues will be loosened before grand juries.

Asks D. A. R. to Aid.

"Lest I be viewed as an alarmist, I suggest that you study your own municipality and ask yourselves what has become of the powerful criminals who committed the most violent infractions? How long was required to convict them? What was the sentence and what has become of them, if they were sent to prison? Are they still there, or are they again free prowling your streets, robbing your homes and assaulting your citizens?"

"I place before you, therefore, the task of enlightening the thoughtless American upon the necessity for a rebirth of vigilance and the casting out of the lethargy which has brought this Nation to a maximum of 1,500,000 serious crimes—murder, robbery, arson, aggravated assault and aggravated thefts—per year until 1 out of every 16 families is annually a victim of some major violation of the law."

In his address on "Men of Steel and Ships of Wood," Dr. Hanson protested against "permitting individuals who have no understanding of our ideals, no sympathy with our traditions and who have invested absolutely nothing in our national well-being, attempting to tear away the sacred foundations on which our great American institutions have been built."

Measured by Character.

"The wealth of a nation is not measured by fertile fields, the roar of machinery or the crowded highways, but by the character of its citizens," he declared.

"There are individuals in the history of every country whose lives embody traits that have exerted a far-reaching influence in the trend of national development. We shall be better able to face the problems of our own day when we have communed with those who have so nobly helped to solve the problems of other days."

He cited as one such individual Robert E. Lee, who, "when the war had swept the last vestige of his earthly possessions, appealed to his fellow Southerners to forget and dedicate themselves to the building of one country under one flag."

"The outstanding need of America is a great spiritual revival," he declared. "Our generation is suffering from spiritual anemia."

During the afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt tendered the D. A. R. a reception at the White House. President General Becker assisted the First Lady in receiving the 2,000 delegates.

D. C. Nominee Overwhelmed In D. A. R. Race

Mrs. Grove Defeated for One of Seven Offices for Vice President.

Mrs. Harry Colfax Grove, the District nominee for one of the seven offices of vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was defeated yesterday by "administration" oppotition.

Running last on the ticket of nine candidates, Mrs. Grove's defeat was laid to the resentment of the "administration" because of her support last year of Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine, who opposed Mrs. William A. Becker for the president generalship.

Defeated with Mrs. Grove, who attained 851 votes, was Mrs. Allen Harris, of Tennessee, with 1,063 votes.

The winners and their votes were:

Emeline A. Street, of Connecticut, 1,415.

Mrs. Mortimer Platt, of Missouri, 1,389.

Mrs. Harold T. Graves, North Dakota, 1,366.

Housing Plan Hailed as Blow To Selfishness

N.Y. Publisher Favors Bill for Federal Subsidy on Home Loans.

J. David Stern, New York and Philadelphia publisher, declared support for the Wagner housing bill yesterday as a means of attacking the "entrenched stupid selfishness" of the "6 per cent boys."

While the publisher said the $976,000,000 program was not adequate, he added, "I am ready to cheer for the first definite housing subsidy, small as it may be."

The measure would authorize the Federal Government to make loans and grants to local housing authorities over a four-year period to stimulate construction of dwellings for low income groups.

While other witnesses also spoke support of the measure, John H. Zink, of the Construction League of the United States, said studies of his organization "lead us to the sincere conviction that the field of capital financing and managing of housing projects should be left to private enterprise, that the Federal Government should not grant capital subsidy to projects and that if any subsidy is necessary it should be an rents after a proper means test is made."

Idle Money Cited.

Stern, devoting a portion of his testimony to financing charges, said:

"It used to be that money was 4 per cent on Governments. The insurance company and banker got 2 per cent extra on mortgages. Now the price has gone down 40 per cent and there is so much idle money in the land, the bankers are worried what to do with it.

"But the 6 per centers don't want to make any reduction. That is the reason I welcome a Government subsidy for housing. It is a direct assault on this entrenched, stupid selfishness.

"It is this combination of speculative builder and '6-per-cent, or nothing' banker that has given us a housing problem. It is this band of inept businessmen which has the great American home by the throat."

Thomas S. Holden, president of the New York Building Congress, indorsed the prinicples of the measure, then added: "Federal subsidy for low rent housing should consist entirely of contributions to be paid by rehoused low income families. Planning, financing, construction and management of housing projects should be under local housing authorities."

Nathan Straus, of the Hillside Housing Corporation, New York, termed the proposal "the best legislation that has been framed in this country" to care for housing.

Miss Perkins Attack Denied By D.A.R. Head

'Wutski Marriage' Circular Laid to State Officer by Mrs. Becker.

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, last night disavowed all responsibility on behalf of the national organization for the action of the Pennsylvania State regent in mailing out to local chapters the fake Matilda Wutski marriage story of Secretary of Labor Frances L. Perkins.

Details of the Wutski story were first revealed to the public several weeks ago, when Secretary Perkins formally denied that she was the Matilda Wutski who was married to a Paul Wilson in Newton, Mass., in 1910. The Secretary pointed out that she was married in New York City to Paul Caldwell Wilson on September 26, 1913, and charged those spreading the tale "with a malicious intent to defame the Administration."

When it was revealed yesterday that the Wutski story had been circularized by Mrs. Harper Shepard, State regent of Pennsylvania, in letters to 124 local D. A. R. chapters as an argument for defeating the Administration - sponsored Kerr-Coolidge bill liberalizing alien regulations, Mrs. Becker stated "the action is strictly an individual action with which the national organization had nothing to do."

"We do not believe in attacking personalities," she continued. The D.A.R. has gone on record as opposing the Kerr-Coolidge bill, but our opposition is based on the principles involved and not on personalities. I would not allow similar tactics by the national organization.

"Nor do I think that any such story should have been sent out before the details were verified," she continued.

In explaining her action, Mrs. Shepard excused herself by saying that she took the Wutski story from a pamphlet issued by the American Vigilante Intelligence Federation of Chicago and that in her letters to the Daughters she gave the source.

Visibly disturbed by Mrs. Shepard's action, Mrs. Becker explained that under the constitution of the D. A. R. State organizations were largely independent, as were the States in the Union.

"The National Society doesn't control the State groups and is not responsible for the actions of its members," she added. "As far as the national society is concerned, you can say we had absolutely nothing to do with it and would not do such a thing."

$15,000 Damages Awarded Laborer

A jury in the District Supreme Court yesterday awarded Frank Jackson, 53-year-old Negro laborer, damages of $15,000 because of injuries he suffered when a truck of the Continental Baking Co. and an automobile driven by an agent of the municipal government sideswiped and crashed into a pushcart on which he was sitting.

Through Attorney Dorsey K. Offutt, Jackson said he was pushing the cart, which contained his tools, when he stopped on Georgia avenue to eat his lunch. At that point, he said, the two automobiles collided and pushed his cart into another machne. His right leg was crushed. He has been through five operations and must go through three more, his physicians said. Justice Joseph W. Cox heard the case.

The accident, which happened June 28, 1934, was fought both by the District and the Bakery company on the theory Jackson was guilty of negligence in stopping his cart where he did.

The four men, all described as about 28 years of age, escaped in an automobile.

Stray Bullet Hits Broker on Yacht

Beverly, Mass., April 23 (AP).—A bullet police said was fired by three boys in target practice struck and wounded Gordon C. Prince, 44, Boston broker and nephew of the financier, Frederick H. Prince, as he stood on his yacht here today.

The bullet lodged in Prince's neck, missing his jugular vein by an inch.

Prince, a nationally known sportsman, was talking at the time with William S. Forbes, jr., and Mrs. Forbes, both socially prominent.

Forbes took Prince to a hospital here, where the bullet was extracted. Later Prince went to his Boston home.

Police said they found three boys, one aged 13 and the other two 9 years old, had been shooting at a target in a nearby boatyard with a small-caliber rifle. The police confiscated the gun.

Scholar Chides Biographers Of Shakespeare

Schelling Criticizes 'Falsities' as Folger Library Marks Birthday.

At the Folger Shakespeare Library's celebration last night of the 372d anniversary of the birth of William Shakespeare, Dr. Felix E. Schelling, famous English scholar of the University of Pennsylvania, criticized false biographers of the great Elizabethan.

Three types of biographies were described by Dr. Schelling.

One, he said, is the "biography of preconception, if not ignorance" in which a French writer represents Shakespeare as a boy of 20 on a sentimental journey through Holland, speaking German, "a language which, thanks to his father" he is alleged to have "known from infancy."

Hits Scandal Seekers.

Another was the "biography of purpose," represented in a recent novel of the Countess de Chambrun, in which Shakespeare is centered among the religious intrigues that sought a return to the church of Rome.

The third, the "biography of scandal," represented by the book of the late Frank Harris, in which it is suggested preposterously that the price which Fate exacts of mankind for the production of works of genius is the moral wreck and overthrow of the great mind that produces them.

The true biographer, said Dr. Schelling, must know all of his material, "which is asking much in view of the literary and critical jungle that has grown up about everything connected with Shakespeare during the past 300 years."

There are biographers, he said, who only collect the material and pile it like lumber; and there are biographers who seek only the rottenness hidden in the pile; and there are the few who can use material constructively, architecturally and artistically.

Scouts "Allegories."

Still others, he said, are writers to whom these plays are not simply plays, but allegories of contemporary politics: Thus Hamlet becomes an allegory of the political happenings that crowded the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

"Brushing aside these awful warnings," said Dr. Schelling, the purpose of biography is "not to interpret nor disclose, still less to decode or decipher, but to realize the subject to our understanding, that we may know Shakespeare (or any other subject) in those qualities in which he was distinguished, not in the trivialities and infirmities that he shared with other men."

Concluding, Dr. Schelling said he found the essence of the finest spirit of worship in the Folger Library.

James Roosevelt, Wife Sail for London Visit

New York, April 23 (AP).—James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, sailed on the Ile de France for England today, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt and a group of Boston insurance men. With his associates, Roosevelt will spend two weeks in London on insurance business.

Young Roosevelt said he would call on Ambassador Robert Bingham in London, but added the visit would have no political significance.

Eleventh St. Fire Survey Ordered

Survey of the 1100 block of Eleventh street northwest to determine whether all the buildings in it conform to the District fire escape and building laws was ordered yesterday by Col. John W. Oehmann, Inspector of Buildings.

The survey was ordered as a result of the fire Wednesday morning at 1111 Eleventh street in a building owned by George H. Amrein. Regulations require fire escapes in all buildings of four or more stores in which ten or more persons are above the first floor.

The survey is expected to be completed in a few days, Col. Oehmann said.

D. A. R. Unveils Tablet to Honor Marcia Burns

A marker to the memory of Marcia Burns, daughter of David Burns, a Revolutionary War officer and large landholder, and to her husband, John Peter Van Ness, was unveiled yesterday afternoon in the north court of the new Postoffice Department Building, site of their former home, by the District Chapter of the D. A. R.

Speaking at the unveiling, Postmaster General James A. Farley lauded the careers of the couple honored and praised the D. A. R. for keeping alive "the patriotic and historic traditions of this place."

"John Peter Van Ness, who married Marcia Burns," Farley recalled, "was a Representative from New York. He was an alderman of Washington in 1829 and was Mayor from 1830 to 1834. He was identified with the civic and financial life of the city and had a splendid record.

"Mrs. Van Ness, or Marcia Burns," Farley continued, "took an active part in the affairs of the city and was the first director of an orphan asylum established in Washington in 1815. It is recorded that she spared neither time nor expense in the interests of this benevolent enterprise."

The marker to the couple was originally set up in 1917 in front of their two-story wood cottage at 1202 D street, but was removed when the building was demolished to make way for the Postoffice Department structure. Through arrangements with Farley the marker was restored.

Mrs. Dale Parrott, regent of the Marcia Burns Chapter of the D. A. R., presided at the unveiling. Mrs. Athol Gilmore, the chaplain, offered prayer, following which 8-year-old Irma Ann Foley, granddaughter of Mrs. Parrott, raised the flag, unveiling the marker.

Mrs. A. Eugene Barr, vice regent of the chapter, was chairman of the committee in charge.

Another Lash Victim Heard by Tampa Court

Bartow, Fla., April 23 (U.P.).—Another victim of the Tampa floggings today described the lashing that cost the life of Joseph Shoemaker, Tampa labor organizer.

In a courtroom hushed and tense, Eugene F. Poulnot, 39-year-old printer, told how he was kidnaped as he left the Tampa Police Station last November 30, spirited to a woodlot on the edge of town, and whipped into unconsciousness.

This testimony was a keystone in the State's effort to convict seven former policemen of conspiracy, kidnaping and false imprisonment.

Dog Show Here Draws Record List of Entries

Hundreds Are Expected to View Annual Event Tomorrow.

Hundreds of Washington dog owners and thousands of local dog fanciers will gather tomorrow at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club, some to show their dogs and others to see the finest bred dogs in the country in their annual local competition.

The show, held by the National Capital Kennel Club every year for the last seven, ranks well up among events of its kind. Last year the local show was rated eleventh largest in the United States, and, while entries for tomorrow's show have not been tabulated, local entries have increased to almost double those of last year, so the largest entry in the club's history is expected.

All the popular breeds will be represented and some breeds so rare that there are only eight or ten of the breed in the country. For example, the keeshonds, the kuvasz and the salukis are breeds recently imported and practically unknown to the average citizen.

The collie entry tops the list with 58 entered, cockers are second with 50 and Boston terriers a close third with 45. Some of the other breeds well represented are setters with 41 entries, 40 dachshunds and 37 great Danes.

The dogs will be judged in 11 rings, starting at 9 a. m. and continuing until [illegible] but five have been eliminated. These five will represent the finest in each group and from them the best dog in the show will be chosen. The choosing of this best dog is the highlight of the day, which ends when Mrs. Anne Roosevelt Boettiger presents the lucky dog with the best-in-show award.

Dogs' Paralysis Cause Found, Scientist Says

Philadelphia, April 23 (AP).—Discovery of a hereditary infantile paralysis in dogs and its cause, a mechanism which may be at work in human beings, was reported to the American Pholosophical Society today by Prof. Charles R. Stockard, of Cornell University Medical College.

The hereditary dog paralysis is indistinguishable in some ways from the infantile paralysis of children. A somewhat similar hereditary paralysis of children is known.

Discovery of the mechanism in inheritance may be the link for better understanding of all these forms of muscle destroying paralysis.

The bellhop sees a lot of people . . . hears what they have to say . . . knows what they like to do. Ask him three questions about beer.—Which beer does everybody from everywhere know?—Which beer has an exquisite bouquet and delightful flavor all its own?—Which beer is most called for in the best hotel dining rooms and restaurants? He'll answer your three questions with one word—Budweiser.

You know there's iron in spinach, but did you know there are metal particles in barley? They come from harvesting machinery, freight cars and conveyors. They're so small . . . but chemically harmful to beer. So, all barley for Budweiser passes twice under strong electromagnets that lift out all the metal. For the same reason—to protect it from metal—Budweiser ages in glass-lined tanks.

Nice, gentle creatures, these buffalo. Yes—until their supply of mineral salts is threatened. Then they fight . . . anything . . . anybody. No wonder! Every living thing must have these mineral salts to go on living. A good reason why you should drink Budweiser, which contains all four; especially in hot weather, when you lose these mineral salts through perspiration.

Subversive Oysters.

Nobody expects logic to be paramount in speeches at a patriotic convention. But Prof. Gustavus Walker Dyer, of Vanderbilt University, ignores its very existence in informing the D. A. R. that "the oyster is a socialist who hates to struggle" and who is "more dead than alive." Dr. Dyer, it should be noted in all fairness, is a professor of sociology—not of biology.

If socialism appeals only to flaccid and molluscous types of human nature, as Dr. Dyer boldly asserts, it is curious that he should be so alarmed at the tactics of those who believe that rugged individualism tends to produce ragged individuals.

The oyster, poor creature, does not bore from within, but is bored into from without. And even the most timid D. A. R. is scarcely likely to shiver at the picture of an army of subversive oysters raising the red flag over the White House. Of course, oysters are associated with shells, but more to their own detriment than that of others. And finally it was scarcely in good taste for this inland professor so to attack the inoffensive bivalve at a time of year when his gastronomic popularity is on the wane.

Intentionally or not, Dr. Dyer's prattle about socialistic oysters and individualistic eagles was merely silly. The same cannot be said of some of the remarks made by Admiral Standley before the D. A. R. convention. There is, for instance, a "made-in-Germany" flavor to the statement that "an army and a fleet are simply the projections of national character, reflecting it exactly in all its strength and its weakness."

Even without a swastika flag on the platform of Constitution Hall, attempts to identify national character with militaristic power would be resented in any democracy. And since the Army and Navy are essentially socialistic enterprises it is somewhat difficult to reconcile the Dyer oyster theory with the projection-of-national-character thesis upheld by Admiral Standley.

After the orgy of slipshod oratory to which its members have been exposed, the D. A. R. is particularly to be congratulated for adopting a resolution indirectly attacking the local Red rider provision. For many of the ladies must be wishing, this week, that the ban against any mention of communism had been extended from the District schools to Constitution Hall.

Dude Lester In Washington.

In one respect, at least, Dude Lester, of Erskine Caldwell's creation in "Tobacco Road," would have been completely at home in Washington. For, "by Gad and by Judas" that submarginal son of backwoods Georgia was "the horn-blowingest fool" his father, Jeeter, ever did see. To blow and blow and blow again the calliope arrangement on Bessie's automobile was Dude's delight. Not to signal, not to warn, but simply to blow—that, to his mind, was a horn's chief function. Washington is only too familiar with the type.

But it won't be long now. Effective July 1, a new regulation has been announced by Commissioner Hazen's noise abatement committee, forbidding the sounding of automobile horns for any reason between 11 p. m. and 7 a. m. Only fire, police and other emergency vehicles will be exempt. Not only that, but street cars, buses, trucks, newsboys, milk wagons and horses, radios and loose manhole covers will all be subject to muffling under the projected ruling. Hearing—or not hearing—will be believing, of course. But if the small-hour cacophony can be modulated appreciably, a hymn of thanksgiving will be heard to rise in grateful counterpoint from the lips of nerve-racked thousands.

London, Paris and—just recently—New York have adopted similar ordinances and found them effective. However, it is doubtful whether their strictures, particularly against automobile horns, were quite as absolute. Instead of tabooing horns "for any reason whatever" they have forbidden horn blowing except as a danger signal. In view of the fact that Washington's stop-and-go lights are turned off at midnight, it would seem essential to allow the driver some right to signal in emergencies.

It may be argued that the present law already allows only "reasonable warning" and that the too-easy disregard of it demands the harsh wording of the new proposal. The reply to this is that, harsh or no, quiet can come only if the objective of quiet is unflinchingly sought. And police officers will find enforcement of anti-noise regulations far more easy if the law is in every way reasonable. Reasonable quiet is all Washington asks.

Foreign Trade Expansion.

Although our foreign trade is still far below the pre-depression level, it has shown a rapid recovery since 1932 and 1933. Exports, which amounted to only $330,000,000 during the first three months of 1933, totaled $575,000,000 in the first quarter of this year. Imports rose concurrently from $275,000,000 in the opening quarter of 1933 to $581,000,000 in the three months ended March, 1936. Of especial interest is the fact that the expansion of imports has outstripped the rate of growth of exports, with the result that our merchandise balance for the present year is slightly "unfavorable," to use the misleading term inherited from early economic writers.

No doubt some opponents of reciprocal tariff bargaining will cite this shift in the merchandise trade balance as evidence that the Administration has driven some bad bargains with other countries, granting them trade concessions without exacting an adequate quid pro quo. Such conjectures, however, would be entirely without foundation. In the first place the tendency for imports to rise more rapidly than exports has been in evidence for some time, despite the artificial stimulus to exporting resulting from dollar devaluation. In the second place, the tendency for imports to gain over exports is the inevitable result of our post-war position as a creditor country.

It was a foregone conclusion that the United States could not continue year in and year out to pile up export balances in trade with debtor countries unless we were prepared to lend them the money with which to buy our goods. The depression, which put a stop to liberal selling to foreigners on credit, has simply brought fulfillment of the sure prediction that a more evenly balanced exchange of goods was essential and unavoidable.

Of course, when foreign trade figures are subjected to detailed analysis, it becomes evident that innumerable special causes, operating at any given time, affect the value, volume and kinds of commodities exported and imported. While pointing out that the relationship between imports and exports is determined by general economic laws, it is possible to argue that the expansion of imports or the growth of exports has been facilitated by trade agreements which have lowered tariff barriers. Again, however, the evidence is as yet insufficient to warrant any very sweeping conclusion. Although our trade with the countries with which we have concluded reciprocal tariff agreements has, with few exceptions, shown a gratifying expansion, increases have in some cases been more pronounced in the trade carried on with other countries.

While Canadian shipments to the United States have risen rapidly, for example, our purchases from Great Britain, with whom we have no reciprocal agreement, have lately shown an even greater increase, both absolutely and relatively. Moreover, both our import and export trade with France has expanded decisively as compared with a year ago. In fact, a geographical survey of foreign trade statistics leads to the conclusion that the gains in both our export and import trade have been due chiefly to a world-wide improvement in business which has increased the demand for goods and the ability to buy them.

No doubt a lowering of tariffs and a removal of trade barriers has helped to force the pace of recovery, and has favorably affected the value and volume of the trading in specified commodities. But the multiple causes, general and specific, economic and political, constant and intermittent, that affect international trade can not be studied and weighed individually.

The attempt to do so is not only futile, but interferes with a constructive solution of our foreign trade problem. That must be based upon acceptance of the fact that in final analysis trade between nations rests upon an exchange of goods, instead of one-sided selling. Trade, in other words, is trade.

Check To Zioncheck.

The firmness and dignity with which Judge Casey handled the Zioncheck imbroglio stand out in sharp contrast to the Congressman's own conduct. In view of the difficulties encountered in taking Mr. Zioncheck into court, the recess ordered by Judge Casey—which meant several hours behind the bars for the Congressman—was particularly appropriate. The fines, for speeding and contempt, likewise indicate that the local courts are not impressed by the silly "you-can't-arrest-me" attitude.

Speaker Byrns and other officials of the House also deserve a large measure of credit for the satisfactory disposition of the case. When they decided not to intervene because Mr. Zioncheck was "in the jurisdiction of the court" they appropriately emphasized the very limited nature of "Congressional immunity." Apparently this means that when members of the House violate local traffic regulations they will receive no protection whatsoever from Congress. That very sensible attitude might well have been enunciated long ago.

Still the extent of the court's jurisdiction over members of Congress accused of traffic violations and similar offenses has not been as positively determined as is desirable. The arrest of Mr. Zioncheck was as strange a farce as has ever been enacted locally. The Representative is quoted as saying that he "may sue for illegal arrest." While this sounds like an empty bluff, it may be hoped he will do just that.

Indeed, one way for Mr. Zioncheck to re-establish his rather tarnished reputation in this community would be by pursuing such a suit to the Supreme Court to help define the limits upon Congressional immunity from arrest. It would be a fine gesture, for, of course, the Seattle Representative would lose the suit.

Not Lacking In Significance.

A formal statement handed to newspapermen by Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez, President-elect of Cuba, explains that his visit to this country with his family is merely a vacation having no political significance. Probably this remark could be accurately interpreted to mean that he did not come to Washington to take up any special problem with the United States Government. But in the larger sense of the word, this tour is certainly not devoid of significance.

As a manifestation of friendship for and confidence in Cuba, the Roosevelt Administration abrogated the Platt amendment at a time when the insular republic was still in a state of dangerous unrest. By this act the political tie between the two countries was broken. For the first time Cuba became completely her own master. Yet upon his election to the Presidency, Dr. Gomez announced that one of his primary aims is "to deepen the bond of friendship" between his country and the United States. Now, on his vacation, he comes to Washington personally to express his good will to the President, the Department of State and the American people.

Thus, in the dissolution of any form of political bondage, Cuba and the United States draw closer together in real friendship. In turn, this new feeling of voluntary mutual co-operation has become a powerful stimulus to the forthcoming Pan-American conference on peace problems. Certainly that is politically significant.

With the aid of the United States, through the reciprocal trade agreement, Cuba has been steadily tending toward a greater degree of economic stability, although many difficult problems still remain to be solved. The fact that the President-elect feels free to take a rather extended vacation abroad indicates that Cuba is on the road to recovery from the depression and the chaos of the Machado regime. That, too, is significant.

Since the war with Spain the United States has become acquainted with several Cuban Presidents who have come here involuntarily. It is far more pleasant to greet a President-elect who comes of his own free will. The mere fact that Dr. Gomez is here, expressing his good wishes and hopes for the future, is sufficient evidence that the Cuban people also find the new co-operative attitude pleasant.

The Methuselah Diet.

"Half of what you eat kills you"—so runs the adage. But scientists at Cornell plan to overtake the saying and scrutinize it for the modicum of truth. They suspect that the calories which are so valuable on the uplifted forks of active youth may be quite the contrary to middle and old age. Much as we know of the feeding of infants, and the professional shelves are filled with monographs, the proper nourishment of maturity is still a wide-open field.

Already the Cornell nutritionists have discovered, in the life history of rats, that a diet low in calories preserves the creatures' lissomeness and agility into an age when, by rights, they should be reviewing their sins and thinking of the Happy Hunting Ground. One rat, thus fed, lived happily to an age equivalent to 150 years in human life. If the scientists are right, we may before long be eating our way toward hailing distance of Methuselah. But before life insurance premiums are scaled down, they want to be sure. So the Rockefeller Foundation has granted Cornell $42,500 for a six-year attack on the problem.

It is a little surprising that this grant did not come from the lately bulging coffers of the Townsend Plan. No campaign promise yet concocted could equal a hope, held out to every citizen, of 90 years of health and appetite on an income of $200 a month. But perhaps it was better technique to sell the idea before the traditional expectancy of life is doubled.

A bottle made of glass that has almost as much resiliency as rubber has been invented by some one, probably an umpire.

The dogs of war never cut any wisdom teeth.

Reaping The Whirlwind.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Apocrypha says: "When one buildeth, and another pulleth down, what profit have they then but labor?"

The Government's policy is to put unemployed men to work—any work, useful or useless—to save them from the stigma of accepting the dole or charity.

But the men are not deceived. They know that they are accepting work-charity, and this weakens the fiber of their manhood.

Real work springs from men's real needs. Boondoggling springs from artificial needs devised and fostered by a political party that seeks to keep in power by posing as the poor man's friend—the pose of all demagogues since time began.

The Administration found a rich soil for helping the poor man, but sowed it with weeds. It has sown the wind, and it shall reap the whirlwind. CHARLES HOOPER.
Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, April 18.

The Lunacy Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those persons in favor of the bill opposed by your correspondent, Mr. Glazier, on the ground that "it is much cheaper to rent two doctors and a lawyer than to influence the tender mercies of juries" should be reminded that they themselves, their widows or daughters might some day become the victim of such a vicious law.

"Significant."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is significant that Herbert Hoover is the one man in the Republican Party whom the New Dealers single out to attack. It is also significant that their principal charge against the greatest living humanitarian should be lack of feeling in regard to human suffering.

ISABEL PITTS GOODWIN.

"Let The Old Rest."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is easy for the President to tell industry they must create jobs by reducing hours, but where is the money coming from when, due to the unemployed, there is no buying power to absorb what is manufactured, or produced by the farmer? It is a well-known fact that there is no overproduction but an under-consumption, which cannot be corrected until the working people can get employment at a living wage. And I don't believe the young and healthy want, or expect, less than eight hours per day, certainly not until business gets in a position to give them less hours at the same pay. It will be time enough to work that out as the machine age increases and employment decreases.

It is now a proven fact that we cannot have the improved machines and work for all, so why not let the old, who have already served their time at long hours and without machines to lighten their tasks, rest a while and put the young, who in many cases are now being supported by the old, once more in the harness and forever stop all this boondoggling, alphabetical soup conglomeration and send these agitators back to their farms, schools, Russia or wherever they belong. And if the President thinks he can improve the farm situation let him demonstrate it on his broad acres at Hyde Park and in Georgia, laugh and grow fat at his own expense for a change. J. A. MATHENY.
Forest, Va., April 22.

The Railroad Employes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Consolidation of terminals, mergers of systems and abandonment of transportation facilities, or any other so-called economies which throw railroad workers out of their jobs can only be made effective at the expense of the employes—80 to 90 per cent of the alleged savings in all of the plans comes out of the workers' pockets.

For years the productivity and responsibility of railroad employes have consistently increased—and at the same time the number of employes has consistently decreased. There are approximately 12,000,000 unemployed wage-earners who, with their families, are supported only by public relief. Among these millions are scores of cases of railroad workers of whom about 800,000 are now unemployed. If thousands of those still employed are to be deprived of work, they will, for the large part, have no means of subsistence except through private or public charity.

Several hundred thousand railroad workers have only been employed part time for a long period. Layoffs due to bad business are but temporary and expected. However, the permanent dismissal of these workers, who, through co-ordination, lose the employment which they now have, will result in their becoming public charges. The worker, the conscientious able-bodied man, accepts doles reluctantly and only as a stop-gap. It would be far better for the Government to subsidize his continued employment, thereby gaining in exchange for it public service, than to deprive him of employment and then assume the burden of his support in idleness. Rejuvenating The Parks—Pro And Con.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let this be a letter to end letters on rejuvenation of local parks.

Since there are the well-known two sides to every question, let us list the advantage of each side before judging.

Before the rejuvenation, Washington's parks served these purposes:

Added scenic beauty to the Nation's Capital.

Gave pleasure to flower lovers.

Gave shade.

Provided an ideal place to spend the remaining 5 minutes of that lunch hour before returning to a stuffy office.

Provided a landing place for pigeons; a haven for apartment-tortured dogs.

Provided (on the grass) a night's lodging for many unfortunates.

But the other side has just as many—and more advantages, to wit:

Shows visitors that Washington has more miles of park pavement than any city in the United States.

Allows theorists to discuss how many and what kinds of flowers might have been grown in such-and-such an amount of space.

Abolishes grotesque, inartistic shadows.

Prevents huge financial losses suffered by the Government and private enterprises resulting from employes remaining overtime at lunch, getting spring fever, neglecting official duties.

Prevents the spread of plant insects.

Provides hot cement upon which to test the stamina of dogs; to fry eggs for newspaper photographers; to check the accuracy of the shoe salesman's statement that the Jones shoe will hold up under any conditions.

Abolishes winding walks, formerly believed to be the cause of much vertigo.

Insures, through removal of benches, strong physical constitutions for future generations.

Any unbiased person can see that the rejuvenation was conceived wisely and upon solid utilitarian principles. BARRY W. TALBOT.
Washington, April 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Living on Capitol Hill, I had paid little attention to the protests regarding the destruction of our parks in the Northwest section. But I have a friend, a D. A. R., at the Powhatan Hotel and I called there yesterday. I was shocked at the sight of the little park across the street. It looks like a parade ground—the walks are wide enough for crowds to pass at one time—and ugly! The small space allowed for grass can not even shield the eye from that glaring expanse of pavement. I understand now why the residents of that section are so unhappy and brokenhearted.

I think one of the worst features of the situation is the futility of a complaint against the powers. The only reply which I have seen printed was so condescending as to be insulting—"Wait, little children, and you will see how nice it all is." To tell Washingtonians who have had spring epitomized by lilacs that they—the lilacs—are not suitable for this zone! There are no words—

We take our beating from the strangers and invaders, but we fret.

ELLEN E. ARNOLD.
Washington, April 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a resident for 30 years in or near Washington, I wish to add my voice to those opposing the ruthless "modernizing" of the city parks; formal lines with broad concrete walks offer no invitation to the average city dweller to seek a bit of recreation or change from the rectilinear formal street arrangement.

I can never forgive the destruction of the Mall simply because it did not meet the ideas of a group of landscapers of the moment. Now the next thing will be agitation to tear down the Smithsonian Institution so a bit more straight road may be constructed. This building is getting to be almost historic, and will be if given a chance.

Can one imagine the English tearing down the Tower of London or Westminster Abbey to "modernize their city?" It is high time we took a page of lesson from our more experienced relatives across the Atlantic. E. C. STANTON.

Two Views On Dogs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A two-column paid advertisement in a New York daily states:

The President also should have stated: "We will not allow any more money to be spent in boondoggling. No more will we build for our dogs such a white marble dog pound as was built in Memphis, Tenn., at a cost of $25,000, complete with shower baths, while many of our people are living in squalor."

So here is a citizen who pays good money to "slam" the dogs in a remote Southern community. Does he remember, or did he ever know, that dogs and man entered into a treaty about the year 1,000,000 B. C., that for approximately one million years, in return for less food than they would have got in the wilderness, the dogs captured for the men their food, guarded their camps and policed their children against feral kidnapers?

I revert to the primordial compact between man and dogs, in which man was the gainer almost exclusively and dog was the loser almost exclusively. Why raise hydrophobic outcries when one local community, away off yonder in the South, in order to give work to humans, starts out to be decent toward its dogs? JOHN COLLIER.
Alexandria, Va., April 20.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Have we not had quite enough of barking dogs in our backyards and on our streets in the early morning hours? A wailing cat can be treated to a bootjack or a rolling pin—in fact, anything convenient—and neighbors will approve. But once touch a dog and the cry is heard, "cruelty to dumb animals." People who own barking dogs and who trot their pets up and down our thoroughfares forget that the "cruelty" is suffered by human beings who live in the city 12 months out of the year.

In the beautiful picture which the apocalyptic writer draws of the Holy City, into which comes nothing vile, he expressly says: "Without are dogs." J. O. K.

The Post Impressionist

Last News From Lake Murray.

Post Office, Friday.

ON the Ninth Day of April, A. D. 1936, we (under compulsion from our immediate boss) sent out a columnar S. O. S. for information as to the reality of Lake Murray, which was registered on certain young maps of South Carolina, but not on certain elder ones. Within a week we were able to publish assurances from two U. S. Senators, one officer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, an executive of the American Automobile Association and from five other authorities.

That should have been enough. However, that wasn't all.

The press of the Palmetto State has given "considerable publicity" to our humble efforts—Lake Murray keeps on washing against our little desk.

* * *

And, as our Column is only a column long—as, also, it appears merely six times in each week—the Lake is flooding us. In case there remain any doubts about the truth and charm of the new Loch Superior, we shall now publish portions of a communication, addressed to the Editor of The Washington Post by Hunter A. Gibbes, Attorney and Counsellor at Law, who lives in Columbia, S. C., only a few miles from the debated water and must often have seen it with his own eyes. But thereupon the controversy must cease and terminate.

"Dear Sir, It is a matter of grievous regret and mortification to me that your brilliant and interesting Post-Impressionist knows nothing of our Lake Murray . . . Yes, indeed, Lake Murray is a reality, and one does not require a road-map or a microscope to find it.

"It is formed by a dam, nearly two miles long, across the turgid waters of Saluda River . . . It has the reputation of being the biggest earthen—not earthen-ware—dam in the world . . . This dam not only dams up the water, but it makes a lot of power . . . quite sufficient to keep us from going to bed in the dark, except when a generator or fuse blows out—which does not often happen.

"The shores . . . are dotted with hundreds of cottages . . . We do not get any joy at all out of our stock; nevertheless, this is offset by a lot of fun in our outings on the lake, both summer and winter: these are the dividends . . . The swimming is not bad at all, especially in the winter when the water is not unduly warm. There is one thing you city folks have which we don't have, and refuse to have: it is the telephone. We come up here to get rid of it—here the fishing line is mightier than the telephone cable.

"On the lake, in many coves and harbors, are moored hundreds of boats of all sizes and descriptions . . . Only battleships and submarines are excluded, except occasionally when the sheriff tries, more or less vainly to stop someone from fishing on Sunday.

"The sailing races on Lake Murray are more or less celebrated in several counties in these parts. The sailing is fine. There is plenty of elbow room and enough breeze . . . Sometimes it is a bit too breezy. When a squall suddenly comes up, a sailboat may turn over. What of it? The water is only 140 feet deep . . .

"Mosquitoes?

"No. None at all. I have heard and seen a lot of them in Washington, and even New Jersey; never has one sung his song or presented his bill in or around Lake Murray . . . Believe it or not, it is true.

"The fishing is unsurpassed . . . It is not unusual for a fisherman to go out of a sunny Saturday afternoon and bring in a dozen trout—some of them might be seven or eight pounders.

"Your guileless and misguided Post-Impressionist should have fished out his vacation right here. If he had, he would have carried back to Washington fish-stories tall enough to compare favorably with some of those of the President of the New Deal. He (the Post-Impressionist) does not deserve another vacation for the next hundred years.

"However, if you relent and give him one, send him to Columbia.

"Let him leave his brilliant and facetious fountain pen at home, and bring rod, reel, a few old clothes, and the usual abbreviated bathing-suit. We will be glad to point out Lake Murray as Exhibit A, and give him the finest of swimming and sailing and fishing. What more could an unimpressed Impressionist want?"

We won't tell what more we want. We haven't yet taken our 1936 vacation. When we do take it, we are going, as usual, to Sebasco, on the shores of Maine's Casco Bay. And that'll be soon. However, these presidential-campaign summers are wearing upon a non-political columnist: we expect some weary week-ends along about mid-August. If hospitable Lawyer Gibbes keeps on asking us, he may, on some morning of the torrid season, find us wilting at his doorstep.

P. S.: After all—watch this space tomorrow, for an interesting development!

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Beneath The Pinwheel.

It is going to be a bit of a problem to get our athletes and our tourists into Germany and out again this summer unless they are very careful to forego all the rights and privileges which Nazis enjoy in the United States and conduct themselves in all matters as if they were subjects of the Dictator.

There is always some risk of being caught with an illegal document in Germany.

In the first place, almost any document which does not praise Adolf Hitler and indorse massacre as a method of government is a seditious paper, and any reference to the business activities of Horst Wessel, the Nazi national hero, is a serious crime.

Then, too, innocent persons often find seditious pamphlets in their pockets which they did not know were there. This sort of document seems to be a part of the regular equipment of the Nazi stool pigeon, to be inserted in the pocket of the person selected for arrest.

Possibly they are printed on the same government presses which turn out instructions for the sowing of sedition amid such peaceful neighboring peoples as the Swiss and Czechs.

It was your correspondent's experience one evening on reclaiming his overcoat from the check room in a restaurant to find in one of the pockets a German booklet which seemed to contain nothing more seditious than recipes for German dishes.

The cover had that appearance, and the first few pages were those of a cook book. But a little further in the cook book became a political tract. One paragraph referred to Adolf Hitler as "Funny-face," and that in any German court sitting under the spell of the spinning pinwheel is seditious matter.

They would not even permit a defendant to call experts and prove that Hitler's face is funny, although many cartoonists, who are experts in funny faces, would take the stand and swear it is. It is hard to see how it could be anything else, considering that Hitler copied his mustache from the most successful comedian that the world has ever known and his flopping bang from Raymond Hitchcock, a man who left them laughing when he said goodby.

Possibly even this temperate and instructive essay would be regarded as a seditious writing in Germany, even though its intention is to encourage good conduct among tourists in the Reich. The Nazis are full of contradictions, but among a people who live beneath the pinwheel things have a tendency to go 'round and 'round.

• • • •

The German Embassy in Washington might be induced to publish a summary of the German laws, pointing out for American travelers precisely what privileges Nazis enjoy in our country which Americans are not allowed in Germany.

For one thing, Nazis in the United States are permitted to ridicule the American President orally and in writing and to hold public meetings for the disparagement of the American system of government. Of course it is impolite of a guest in a foreign land to do these things, but good manners, as we see them, are a sign of weakness to a true Nazi. Consequently, if a gathering of Nazis in the United States ridicules not only the Government, but the system of government and everything that is American, that is a show of strength and good manners according to the teachings of Adolf Hitler.

It is unlawful and dangerous to life and limb to carry your own German money out of Germany on leaving the country, and Americans have been sent to prison for this error. True, they had bought the money with American money, which is better than Germany money, and it was theirs.

But Americans over there do not have the same rights that Max Schmeling and Miss Marlene Deitrich enjoy among us. Herr Schmeling is rich in American money, and when he goes home it is his privilege to take it with him—all but the income tax. Miss Dietrich, too, has done remarkably well in dollars, which are hers to do with as she pleases.

• • • •

Some American diplomats on the other side take the view that Americans should be warned to stay out of Germany because their passoprts do not protect them, as Karl Nisselback, of Brooklyn, and others have learned.

The British passport says His Majesty's government requires that the bearer be permitted to pass without let or hindrance and that he be given every assistance of which he may stand in need. The American passport is an apologetic little book merely requesting the Nazis not to throw the bearer into prison, if they will be so kind. The British tourist thus enjoys much more security among the Nazis, and if Nisselback were British he would not be in prison now. Or if he were, then two Nazis would be in prison in England.

If it isn't asking too much, maybe the Nazis could be induced to take a party of American tourists through the prison where the American tourists through the prison where the American from Brooklyn is doing two years for possessing a pamphlet.

Misericordia Debaters Defeat Catholic U. Team

Catholic University's debating team was defeated by visitors from Misericordia College, of Dallas, Pa., yesterday by a 2-to-1 decision.

The Catholic University team, under direction of its president, Joseph Spitzig, nephew of Bishop O'Reilly, of Scranton, argued that Congress should not have the power to overide decisions of the Supreme Court when it declares acts of Congress unconstitutional. The Misericordia team argued in the affirmative.

As Italy Has Her Way

Il Duce Proceeds Unabashed As France And England Attempt To Promote And Ignore The League Of Nations Simultaneously.

By David Wills.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

The recent meetings of the Sanctions Committee at Geneva seemed at first to be merely a repetition of the mixture as before.

Once again the nations gathered to hear Mr. Eden speak big words against Italian aggression, which are not firmly supported by the words of his government back home. Once again Mussolini put his propaganda machine to work to magnify his Abyssinian victories, refused to recognize League jurisdiction over the use of gas in Abyssinia, replied to demands that hostilities cease with an exhortation to his generals to wipe out the whole Abyssinian army. Once again M. Flandin played the Italian game by urging procrastination, not only opposed further sanctions but asked for the present half-hearted measures to be lifted.

But although the Geneva scene looks unchanged, the surroundings are vastly different.

Thanks to past vacillations, France and Britain are now faced with an arrogant Germany in possession of her own Rhineland, an Austria with resumed conscription, and an Italo-Austro-Hungarian pact intended mainly to strengthen Mussolini's position in Europe. It looks as if both the French and the British may be forced at long last to make a final choice between their conflicting policies. For some time we have both of us been trying to have our cake and eat it; now our pretenses can no longer avail us.

The French have countered Hitler's reply to the Locarno powers' questions with a legal refutation of all Germany's claims and accusations. They also suggest a positive plan for European reconstruction on the basis of a regional European group under the League of Nations, with mutual guarantee of frontiers, no revision of those frontiers except by unanimous consent and no demand for such revision for the next 25 years.

France proposes, that is, that Europe should rely for peace upon application of League policy, at the very moment that she refuses to apply this policy against Italy. If the League fails, France must rely for protection against Germany on military alliances. And while she talks of the League, she hopes to confront Germany in the west with a reconstructed Stresa front between herself, Italy and Britain, and in the east with a Russo-Czechoslovak alliance. France can get Britain into the alliance only if she praises the League of Nations; and can get Italy only if she damns the League of Nations. So far she has done both with success, but the breaking point is rapidly being reached.

League Covenant Clashes With Alliances.

The British have played a more complicated game. Because the British public has been sold the League as a safeguard against war, and as a peaceful method of removing injustice, the government must talk of the Covenant as its main policy. That policy is incompatible with military alliances directed against specific countries. But because we are already committed to Locarno, and because we had to bribe the French not to refuse discussion of Hitler's new demands and offers, we have had to enter into definite commitments to assist France and Belgium against Germany.

The British are now faced with an unavoidable problem. Hitler's offer may amount only to a guarantee of non-aggression in the West in exchange for a free hand in the East. But war in eastern Europe must rapidly spread to the west, and to avoid war, Britain must accept the same obligations in the east as in the west. We have been asked by France to join a watertight military alliance with the nations which encircle Germany; and if we refuse to join, we must reply either that Germany is welcome to an eastern outlet or that under the League Covenant we are already obliged to defend any nation subject to German aggression.

But, as in the French case, any such appeal to the League is weakened by our evident reluctance to stop Italy's flagrant violation not only of the League Covenant but of The Hague convention, the anti-gas agreement of 1925, and the Briand-Kellogg pact outlawing war. If Britain wants to avoid specific alliances, she must prove that the League works; if she doesn't want to support the League she must either join an alliance or leave Hitler free.

British Opinion Entirely Contradictory.

At the moment of writing it is reported that the British foreign office is inclined to minimize the Italian victories, to give the Abyssinians quite a long lease of life even if left to themselves, and even to support further action against Italy. But those who might be heartened by this report should compare it with statements made in the House of Lords and the Commons, on the eve of the Geneva meeting. Eden said that the League had gained in strength; Lord Halifax, who is assisting Eden at Geneva, wanted to know in what direction the government might have done anything more than it has done to stop the war; Neville Chamberlain said the League's weapons would not work; the undersecretary for foreign affairs protested that the League had done very well by Abyssinia.

The other countries of Europe may be divided into two classes. For many of the small nations, particularly the Scandinavians, and for the Russians, the League provides the only sure protection against future attacks; they are one voice in their support of action against Italy to vindicate the League's authority. Most of the remaining nations are satellites of great powers and are already lining themselves up to jump in whatever direction seems to promise them the most rewards. Austria and Hungary line up with Italy, although many elements in these countries are friendly to Nazi Germany; Czechoslovakia, Rumania and some others hope for support from Russia and France; Jugoslavia inclines toward Germany; Poland tries to jump three ways at once.

Overlapping all these countries is a fundamental division of peoples into sympathizers with Fascist movements and Socialist movements. If the League fails, mainly because Britain and France fear to undermine Fascist Italy, then it becomes as certain as anything can be that Europe will fall again into war; and if war comes, the odds are heavy that socialist and communist revolutions will overthrow dictatorships of the right. From a European war, Russia stands to gain the greatest advantage—a solution which would be just and fitting retribution on the heads of anti-socialist dictators who preach the glories of war.

British Democracy Seen Threatened.

With this situation to confront our politicians, it might be reasonably expected that the British government is carefully weighing its alternatives, and at long last making up its reluctant mind. Unfortunately it is doing nothing of the sort. The breach in the cabinet provoked by the Locarno and League conversations in London only a few weeks ago has been healed for the moment, since we have successfully staved off French sanctions gainst Germany and have avoided any extension of our European entanglements.

But to that split has succeeded another. As a result of accumulating opposition from within his own party, Baldwin's retirement from the premiership has become more or less imminent, and bitter intrigues have started to find his successor. The rival claimants are Neville Chamberlain and Sir Samuel Hoare, whose infamous Hoare-Laval plan for settling the Abyssinian war has become for many a much regretted might-have-been.

The crisis has become not an opportunity for solving Euorpe's nightmare difficulties, but an occasion for the petty advancement of the political fortunes of quarreling politicians. Britain's democracy is getting into deep water.

Secretary of Treasury Questioned on Tax Bill

Tax Bill Revision Sought

fall $334,000,000 short of three-year revenue requested by the President, and hinted new taxes may be needed next session, Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, indicated that group will attempt to bring revenue up to the full White House requirements.

May Consider Process Tax.

The House took seven weeks to produce its present bill, and if the Senate goes in for extensive review, the Senate will not see the Finance Committee draft until well into June. Although Senator Harrison would not discuss possible additions to the bill, he repeated that $221,000,000 in processing taxes rejected by the House committee will be "considered."

Harrison scoffed at reports of another tax bill next session.

"The way the country is coming back now, with increased receipts coming into the Treasury, we hope we can begin to reduce taxes next year instead of putting them on," Harrison said. "We are not seriously considering a tax bill next session."

The Finance Committee will resume executive sessions on the bill today, and perhaps on Monday will open formal public hearings, with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., as the chief Administration witness.

Although Senate committee members generally were not willing to be quoted, some nine Democrats had serious flaws to pick in the bill and, with the possible exception of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., of Wisconsin, the minority was generally against it. The most frequently repeated criticism was that the bill disregards revenue as a primary need in favor of "reform," at a time when revenue is desperately needed.

Loopholes Suspected.

It was learned that Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering and Herman Oliphant, Treasury counsel, were closely pressed on several suspected loopholes in the bill.

A point stressed was that a corporation might foresee, far in advance, what its earnings would be, and the tax it would have to pay and avoid paying simply by spending its money in advance on operating costs—such as salaries and plant equipment.

Another point raised was that a company might raise needed money by new stock issues to pay off its debts, declare out all of its earnings in dividends, and thus avoid paying any tax.

Committee sentiment appeared to be toward continuation of the present corporation income tax at a slightly higher rate, and imposition on top of this of a moderate tax to "induce" distribution of corporate dividends.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, led off the House defense of the tax measure. He denied Republican assertions that Democrats were "whipped" into accepting the plan, and declared Republicans were not barred from assisting in drafting the measure until "it was fully evident the minority would oppose any tax bill."

Enumerates Objectives.

He enumerated the following objectives of the bill:

"First, to eliminate the present inequalities of our taxation of business profits as between incorporated and unincorporated businesses; second, to remove a very important source of tax avoidance that inheres in our present income-tax laws, and third, as a consequence of the elimination of inequalities and sources of tax avoidance, to increase the Federal revenues to the extent necessary to balance the regular budget—that is, to balance all Federal expenditures other than those made for purposes of relief."

Doughton made no mention of a night conference he and Senator Harrison are said to have had with the President at the White House early this week at which the President is said to have insisted that the Administration's tax plans be adhered to more closely.

Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, led the House Republican attack on the measure, claiming that none of the President's objectives of simplication, reform and revenue will be realized through the bill.

"Impractical" Says Treadway.

"If this is simplification, give me complication," Treadway said. "Anyone that can analyze the drastic changes in our tax system proposed by the bill, which has been public for only 48 hours, or who can intelligently discuss all of its complications and ramifications, has mental capacity that entitles him to be rated as a superman."

Treadway took to the radio again last night to demand that new taxes wait on curtailment of expenditures.

"The policy underlying this new tax bill can serve only to undermine the whole business structure," he said. "It will accentuate the peaks of booms and intensify the adversity of hard times. It is another example of the work of impractical theorists."

Quoting from Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell's book, "The Industrial Discipline," Representative Fred L. Crawford (Republican), Michigan, told the House that Tugwell was "grandfather" of the plan.

Quoting Tugwell as saying the scheme "rests, however, upon an extension of Federal authority which we have, until now, been unwilling to venture" and again, "we can experiment now and we ought to do it before it is too late," Crawford said the new tax proposal "is flavored more with the odor of Federal business dictatorship than it is with a sincere effort to raise revenue."

Hill Denies Complexity.

Chairman Hill, of the tax subcommittee, before undertaking to explain the bill to members, denied "complexity" charges, and stated:

"This language has been reduced to its simplest form possible, and anyone that can read and understand the English language can work out this tax."

Hill expressed doubt that the House would have voted down processing taxes even had they been included in the bill. He said his committee had followed the usual procedure in writing a tax bill, insisting that the Treasury never has written a tax measure. Republicans, he said, were interested mainly in getting excises in the bill as a means of introducing a general manufacturers sales tax.

Representative John Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, told the House that instead of levying new taxes, the Administration could "easily" have cut $1,000,000,000 from its budget estimates. His views were echoed by Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), of Pennsylvania, who demanded stoppage of Federal spending.

Bankhead Asks Speed.

As Republican criticism reached a crescendo, Majority Leader William Bankhead threw himself in the breach to declare the bill "probably the most important legislation of the session" and to demand expeditious action.

Bankhead admitted mistakes have been made in relief spending, but declared "humanitarian" consideration demanded something be done, and "we have done our best to meet the problem bravely and possibly extravagantly." He said he hoped that "conservatively and sensibly" the budget could be restored as the the effects of the depression vanish.

A final Republican thrust at the bill was administered in a radio address last night by Representative John B. Hollister, of Ohio, who termed the corporate tax proposals "outrageous."

"In actual operation, this new tax will add another link to the sinister chain of New Deal legislation which is directed against thrift and economy, those primary virtues which made this country great but which seem to be outmoded today," Hollister said.

Authorize the District to charge those able to pay for service at the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium.

The Senate struck out of the House bill the amendment which would bar any District employe earning $2,400 a year or more from engaging in outside work for pay.

May Be More Lively.

The Senate-House conferences this year are likely to be even more colorful than usual because of the fireworks that have already been set off. These include:

The refusal of the Senate subcommittee to hear Representative Blanton and the sharp exchange of letters between Blanton and Senator Glass and the Texan and Senator Thomas.

The resentment of several Senators against House authors of the anti-Red rider, which they feel was "put over on them" last year.

The personal feud between the acting chairman of the House subcommittee and the District Medical Society.

It was recalled yesterday that several years ago Senators Glass and Nye refused to sign a conference report after the Senate managers had receded on the lump-sum payment issue.

Borah Queries Knox on Bids For Delegates

Idahoan Charges Attempt to Swing His Illinois Votes to Publisher.

By the Associated Press.

In the first open communication between candidates for the Republican Presidential nomination, Senator William E. Borah yesterday asked Col. Frank Knox if he approved efforts the Idahoan said were being made to persuade convention delegates from Illinois to "disregard the wishes of the people."

Borah, in a telegram to Knox, said an effort was being made by friends of the Illinois publisher to get votes for him from delegates elected in districts which Borah carried in last weekk's Illinois primary.

The Presidential primary in Illinois is advisory and not binding upon convention delegates, but Borah's campaign managers have claimed 26 of 49 district delegates because the Senator ran ahead of Knox in those districts.

Knox Claim Disputed.

Knox said here Saturday that all except one of the delegates were "Knox men." The primary was not binding upon them, he said, adding that some of them might vote for Borah on the first ballot because of the popular votes in their districts.

His contention about the number of delegates was disputed by the Borah camp. Friends of the Senator said also that many of the delegates had pledged themselves to follow the outcome of the primary vote.

Borah's telegram to Knox follows:

"I am informed that an effort is being made by your friends and supporters to persuade the delegates in the districts where the vote was for me to disregard the wishes of the people and to vote for you. May I ask if this has your approval and if you propose to help carry out such a program?"

No Comment on Query.

The message was addressed to Knox at his Chicago office, but the publisher was in New York. He said there he had not received the telegram and would not comment on it until he had.

High Democrats here meanwhile were completing arrangements for their Philadelphia convention.

James A. Farley, national chairman, conferred with those who will be in charge of the convention at a luncheon conference in the office of Col. Edwin Halsey, secretary of the Senate. He refused to comment on the convention plans afterward.

There was nothing to indicate that plans for Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, to be the keynoter, and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the permanent chairman, had been disturbed.

Barkley and Robinson were both at the conference, together with Charles Michelson, publicity director of the national committee; Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, and Halsey.

Farley would not say who had been chosen to nominate President Roosevelt for his second term, but from other sources there were strong hints it would be John E. Mack, of Poughkeepsie, who performed a similar role four years ago.

Hoover to Speak May 14.

Philadelphia, April 23 (AP).—The date for the address in Philadelphia of former President Herbert Hoover has been changed from May 18 to May 14, it was announced today at the headquarters of the Republican Women of Pennsylvania.

The change will bring the former President to Philadelphia the night before the caucus of the Pennsylvania delegates to the Republican National Convention. The delegates will be elected April 28.

The New Dealers, Ogden Mills said today, "have no monopoly of humanitarianism, and the Republican Party is fully alive to the broader responsibilities placed upon Government by present-day conditions and the spirit of the times."

Addressing a rally of Republican women, the Secretary of the Treasury in the Hoover administration said the Republican National Convention should set forth such a declaration in its platform.

Mills devoted the greater part of his address to criticising President Roosevelt's Baltimore speech on employment. He characterized the President's remarks as "wishful thinking."

"Now we learn that," he said, "as far as Mr. Roosevelt is concerned, the NRA is not dead but sleeping; that he still urges artificial control by Government of wages, hours of labor and, inevitably, higher prices; that he still refuses to recognize that higher costs mean higher prices; higher prices, lower purchasing power; lower purchasing power, decreased consumption and production, and less opportunity for employment."

Bainbridge Colby, addressing the same meeting, said "this is the first occasion on which I have accepted an invitation to address a Republican organization."

Colby, a Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson, said he was a member of the Democratic Party—"if the party may be said to still exist."

"As a Democrat," Colby said he had this to say to the Republicans: "If your decisions are just and disinterested, if your actions are on the lofty plane of pure patriotism, if you think of your party as an instrument with which to serve the country—as you have done in some noble moments in the past—you will have accession from the conscience-Democrats of the Nation far beyond your calculations, and which will swell your vote not only to the point of success, but overwhelming victory.

"And it will be the victory of America over the enemies of America."

Parking Meter Test Approved By Trade Unit

Traffic Group Would Give D. C. Heads Authority to Try Device.

Although District officials are divided on the scheme, the traffic committee of the Board of Trade yesterday approved plans whereby the Commissioners would have authority to install pay parking meters in the city streets.

Holding its last meeting until next September, the committee indorsed the 1937 supply bill amendment proposed by the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations which would give such discretionary power to the Commissioners, who have expressed opposition to the "park-o-meter" idea.

Also approved was the amendment authorizing the District heads to compel property owners to remove snow from their sidewalks.

Commissioner George E. Allen's suggestion that auto parking be prohibited in the congested area was disapproved, chiefly on the ground that such action would not reduce traffic hazards.

Drivers' "Dangerous Age."

Sub-committee recommendations that no changes be made in present speed regulations and that the junior permit age limit be extended to 23 years were voted upon favorably.

At the present time, autoists between the ages of 16 and 18 are entitled only to junior permits, which are good for one year and authorize the holder to drive no car except the family's. If the change recommended yesterday is adopted, the age limit will be stretched from 18 to 23.

However, persons in the 18-23 group, while ineligible for the regular three-year permits, would not be restrained from driving autos other than their own or family's. It would simply mean the permit had to be renewed each year, with examination.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, a member of the committee, said he is in favor of the revision, provided further studies bear out recent findings that 19 to 23 is the "dangerous age" of motorists. Van Duzer also favors a trial for the parking meters, which are frowned upon by the Commissioners.

Planning Board Move.

John Nolen, jr., planning director of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said yesterday the meter scheme, which has been inrtoduced in several Western cities, may be brought up at the commission's next meeting on Thursday.

The planning body ordinarily is consulted on proposed major reforms in the Capital's traffic control system.

Col. L. C. Crawford presided at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Trade committee. Dr. J. F. Hilton, chairman of the sub-committee on operating regulations, introduced the recommendations on speed laws and drivers' permits.

How a Baby GROWS

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

THE INFANT HAND—From birth to one year, the baby's hand grows in dexterity. The nine photographs below, taken of the same baby, depict development of the infant hand from birth to 52 weeks of age. From left to right, in the top row of pictures, the newborn hand is first shown as a mere cup. Then, at 4 weeks, the hand is shown with the thumb idle and useless. At 6 weeks, the outside fingers are the strongest. At 20 weeks, the baby's grasp becomes a squeeze. At 24 weeks, the fingers, though developing in dexterity, still become tangled with the object held. In the lower row of pictures, the 28 weeks' old hand is shown taking the object from the other hand. Then, at 32 weeks, the inside fingers become the most important. At 44 weeks, forefinger and thumb are specialized. And, finally, at 52 weeks, thumb opposes forefinger with almost adult skill. TOMORROW: Development of twins.

Wire Seizure Charges Asked By Publishers

Black's Activity Censured by Vote of Newspaper Association.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 23.—Charging that the Black Senate lobby committee violated constitutional rights in seizure of telegrams and correspondence, the American Newspaper Publishers Association recommended in a resolution today that all "victims" demand criminal prosecution "of all involved in the odious affair."

By a unanimous vote the fiftieth annual convention adopted a resolution offered by the committee on freedom of the press which also urged that civil damage be sought.

It commended those who by appeals to the courts "have helped to curb" what it described as the illegal conduct of the Senate committee and the Federal Communications Commission.

Cites Liggett Slaying.

Three other resolutions offered by the committee, headed by Col. Robert R. McCormick, of the Chicago Tribune, were adopted without opposition.

In a substitute resolution offered by the committee, the convention asserted:

"The press of the country should resist the attempts of such (political-gangster) alliances in Minnesota and any other State to abridge the freedom of the press, whether abridgement be attempted by lawlessness, legislation or any other means."

It asserted that "officials of the State of Minnesota have long sought to restrain the press in the performance of its functions" and that "these oppressions of the press have been characterized by a campaign of violence against editors criticizing improper political gangster alliances culminating in the murder of Walter Liggett, Minneapolis editor."

Dean Ackerman Talks.

The original resolution summoned the press of the Nation to use its weapon of publicity in "resisting the attempts of politico-crimini alliances in Minnesota or any other place to abridge the freedom of the press."

Col. McCormick in offering the substitute gave no reason for the charge.

The other resolutions commended Louisiana publishers and the Philadelphia Inquirer on legal victories in defense of press freedom.

Depicting the country's newspapers as the safeguards of democracy, Dean Carl W. Ackerman of Columbia University's Graduate School of Journalism, tonight warned against those who would destroy the freedom of the press.

Deal Ackerman cited the prevalence in the United States of what he called "a destructive and a defeatist state of mind toward all institutions, including the daily newspaper," and said:

"The freedom of the press as the embodiment of the citizen's right to the whole truth will prevail from now on only to the degree that it is supported by public opinion."

Freedom "Legally Secure."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the annual dinner of the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, Dean Ackerman continued:

"We learned during the prohibition era that one constitutional amendment could not be enforced. It happened to be the eighteenth. It can be the first." (Freedom of speech and the press.)

Legally, he said, the freedom of the press is secure.

"The daily newspapers won a decisive victory in the Louisiana tax case, but there are many indications today," he went on, "that that case may mark the climax in the ability of the press to defend its constitutional rights in the courts."

Earlier, the New York Advertising Club heard Col. Frank Knox, of the Chicago Daily News, a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, say:

"If a free press is destroyed, a dictator thrives—and the liberties of the people disappear."

"Inflammable Factors."

Expansion of the Press-Radio Bureau's service so as to make its news bulletins available to all radio listeners was urged in a resolution to be voted on tomorrow.

In the field of labor relations, a special committee reported relatively few disturbances during the last year, but warned of the presence of "potentially inflammable factors."

Sir Gerald Campbell, British Consul general, speaking on the program with Dean Ackerman, urged greater co-operation between the United States and Great Britain in world affairs.

"I am not going to suggest to you what form or line that co-operation should take," he said, "but it may come suddenly upon us and then if one or other of us jib because, for instance, it implies pulling chestnuts out of a fire, we shall spend the rest of a short life in gas masks and underground cellars."

Vera Cruz Catholics Ask Church Opening

Mexico City, April 23 (AP).—Two thousand Catholics from Vera Cruz paraded today in front of the national palace in support of a petition for reopening of churches in their home state.

They were told by Louis Rodriguez, secretary to President Lazaro Cardenas, to present their request to the department of the interior. Members of the delegation said that despite the fact the federal government has made known it would not oppose reopening of the churches, they have been unable to get any action from Vera Cruz state authorities. All Vera Cruz churches have been closed since 1930.

Need to Bolster League Is Held Proved by War

International Law Society Hears Teacher Urge U. S. Membership.

Failure of the League of Nations to halt the Italo-Ethiopian war emphasized the need for powers outside the fold to join, Parker T. Moon, Columbia University, told the American Society of International Law here last night.

The League, he said, will not be a telling agency for peace until the United States, Japan and other large countries become active members.

"There is real danger that the League might flounder," he added, "but I prefer to be optimistic about the outlook."

He proposed a League movement to "right the workings" in the Versailles Treaty. Such actions, he said, would result in increased influence and prestige for the international body.

Moon particularly urged discard of the Versailles pact clause which sought to fix war guilt.

Dr. George Grafton Wilson, Harvard University professor of international relations, spoke on "The United States and International Law."

He reviewed developments of international law in this country from colonial days to the present. He told of treaties involving Indians and of the legal aspects of the War of 1812.

Speakers at today's session of the convention in Carlton Hotel will include Hessel Yntema, University of Michigan; Sanford Schwartz, former United States and Mexico general claims arbitrator, and Albert A. Roden, Denison University.

County Clerk For 55 Years Dies in Fairfax

F. W. Richardson Funeral Expected to Be Held Saturday.

Frederick Wilmer Richardson died yesterday at his home in Fairfax, Va., following a short illness. He was 83 years old.

Mr. Richardson served Fairfax County as county clerk for 55 years, prior to his voluntary retirement from office on January 1 this year. He succeeded his father, who had held the office for 50 years previous. During his father's term in office Mr. Richardson served as deputy county clerk for about 16 years.

He was born in Fairfax on December 16, 1853, in a house where the town hall now stands. He had lived in the county all his life with the exception of one year during the War Between the States, when his father moved his family to Buckland in Prince William County because of the brisk fighting around Fairfax Courthouse.

Uncle Tudie, as he was affectionately known to thousands in northern Virginia, was appointed county clerk on October 13, 1880, by Judge James J. Sangster, a Republican, on the death of his father. The following year Judge Sangster opposed Uncle Tudie for the office and was defeated. During his term in office he was only opposed by three men.

In 1883 he married Miss Amelia Lee Buck, of Warren County, Va., who survives him. In 1898 he was a delegate from the Eighth Virginia Congressional District to the National Democratic Convention in Denver, Colo. During the World War he served as a member of the local draft board. During his term in office he served under seven circuit court and four county court judges. When the new Virginia Constitution was adopted in 1903 he became clerk of the county circuit court as well as county clerk.

He was a life long member of the Fairfax Methodist Episcopal Church South and was a member of its board of trustees. He was a member of Henry Masonic Lodge for more than 60 years and an honorary member of the Fairfax Council, Order of Fraternal Americans, and the Fairfax Rotary Club.

In addition to his wife he is survived by a son, Frederick Dawson Richardson; a daughter, Mrs. James McC. Henderson, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services had not been completed last night, but it is expected they will be held Saturday afternoon.

Ickes' Power Loans Assailed As 'Dictatorial'

Attorneys for Utility Firms Say Secretary Followed 'His Own Whimsies.'

By the United Press.

Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes followed "his own dictatorial whimsy" in financing municipal power plants "at waste of the taxpayers' money," utility attorneys charged yesterday.

The declaration featured the day's District Supreme Court argument over allegations of four power companies that the New Deal's $200,000,000 program is unconstitutional and threatens their investments in Alabama, Iowa, Oklahoma and Texas.

It came just after Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat ruled the utilities could not introduce testimony intended to show that Ickes' agreement to finance a publicly-owned electricity system at Plainview, Tex., would create little employment.

"We wanted the evidence to show," Dean Acheson asserted, "that Public Works Administrator Ickes was not making his allocations in keeping with the work-relief program, but was following his own dictatorial whimsies."

Engineer on Stand.

A Kansas City engineer, N. D. Veatch, was on the stand when Acheson flared into his attack. He was prepared to testify that only $56,194 of the $399,000 Ickes allotted to Plainview would have gone for job-making.

"That figure is false," Jerome Frank, PWA power attorney, announced in objecting to Veatch's evidence.

He attacked the amount "as only speculation, and not taking into consideration the money to be spent on project materials that would prime the heavy-goods industry."

Acheson and Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, representing the Edison Institute in the case, lost every move to introduce evidence intended to show that the ten municipal projects involved in the suit would injure private companies.

They attempted to prove the Plainview plant would not be self-liquidating and that its revenue would not repay the Government's 70 per cent loan.

Chief Justice Wheat, however, overruled them again on that attempt. He said "the evidence would not be material; it has no bearing on whether or not Administrator Ickes was acting within his power under a constitutional statute."

The utilities presented R. B. MacDonald, president of the Iowa City (Iowa) Light & Power Co., the second firm involved in the action.

He was to testify that Ickes' $915,000 allotment to Iowa City to finance its own plant was not sufficient to replace the $1,700,000 investment of his firm.

Frank objected, however, and the court shut off that line of questioning.

The other two firms attacking PWA were the Alabama Power Co. and the Texas Utilities Co.

Studio Worker Killed Within View of Stars

Hollywood, April 23 (AP).—Before the horrified eyes of Dolores Costello Barrymore and Bing Crosby, a film studio worker was killed by electricity today and another badly burned.

The dead man was James Reeves, 35. James Haydon, 45, will recover, the studio physician, Dr. J. A. Strathearn, said.

Members of the crew said Reeves and Haydon were leaning against a crane, swinging steel girders into position on the set. By accident, the long arm of the crane grazed a power line carrying 33,000 volts.

Confidence

The bottle is easy to remember
The taste you'll never forget

We thank the Public for its Confidence

In less than two weeks' time, you have purchased hundreds of thousands of bottles of "Wilson—That's all." We thank you for your confidence—and congratulate you upon your excellent judgment in choosing this super-fine blend. Our entire resources are pledged to merit your continued satisfaction.

We thank the Trade for its Confidence

You have placed the largest initial orders for Wilson this new-born industry has yet witnessed. By quickly giving Wilson almost 100% distribution you have made it possible for the public to procure Wilson by the glass and by the bottle. We thank you for this generous gesture of confidence.

No product can command continued public favor unless it is fundamentally sound in quality and fundamentally sound in price . . . Because Wilson Whiskey, first produced away back in 1823, possessed these two fundamentals it commanded and maintained a national reputation which lasted until Prohibition in 1918—almost 100 years of continuous popular approval. What finer tribute could any product want? What finer proof of its fundamental soundness? . . . The Wilson you buy today is built upon the same basic principles—sound quality, sound price. This policy will never change . . . And so we say "You can buy Wilson with Confidence" and we say it and will continue to say it,—briefly—as it was said back in 1823 and for nearly 100 years—unforgettably—

Physical Culturist Finds Stars Better Patients Than World Rulers.

Hollywood, April 23. — Fausto Acki, who used to put Benito Mussolini and former President Woodrow Wilson through daily dozens, finds film actors assay more gold to the pound of excess flesh.

Slender, dark, brilliant-eyed, Acki looks like an Italian, but talks like Greta Garbo. He became a physical culturist because times were dull in the Swedish army during the World War.

Pre-Fascist Italy imported him to teach their officers how to do handstands in a fit of green envy after Acki won the Olympic gymnastic championship in 1920.

"I was in Rome in 1922 when the Fascists marched in," he explained, "and soon Mussolini was coming to my school. I didn't do much with him because he spends al his exercise time riding and fencing, but I did show him Swedish massage and he was so pleased he ordered me to teach his army how to do it.

"I know Mussolini isn't so popular in this country, but he is a strong man, and I like him.

Didn't Like Pay.

"Why did I come to America? They offered me trainership of the Italian Olympic team in 1924, and the pay was 'terrifically lousy,' so I quit."

(Conditioning the Fascisti would have netted Acki 2,000 lire a month, but that only came to about $80 then.)

One of his first jobs in America was training Woodrow Wilson.

"Mr. Wilson was a sick man. About all we could do was massage, and he died soon after," explained Acki. "I was too late. If I had had him ten years before he would have been alive yet."

Acki has a small gymnasium on the RKO-Radio lot, full of elaborate equipment he seldom uses, where he puts filmsters through their paces.

"Picture people appreciate good health," he says, 'and pay well for it."

He refuses to say, however, whether any of his film clients is a better athlete than Mussolini, because "it wouldn't be nice."

The "Perfect Marriage."

"Pat" Paterson and Charles Boyer boast their marriage is an international success, since Boyer has mastered the language of his British actress-wife, and Paterson has learned to speak French like a Parisienne.

They maintain homes in Hollywood, Paris and Yorkshire, England, and plan to spend half the year on either side of the Atlantic.

Boyer is co-starring with Marlene Dietrich in Selznick International's "Garden of Allah," while Paterson plays opposite Henry Fonda in "Spendthrift" on the Walter Wanger lot.

"Ribbed" Into Rowing.

Irked by ribbing of Spencer Tracy and Sylvia Sidney, David Tyrell, former pick-and-shovel artist, will try to paddle a Tahitian outrigger canoe from Los Angeles to Santa Catalina Island.

Tyrell was "discovered" working in a construction gang three months ago, and given a part in M-G-M's "Mob Rule." Tracy and Sidney heard him expand on his prowess in a canoe, and worked on him until he vowed to make the trip.

He'll start late this week, hoping to make the 25 miles in 12 hours.

About The Showshops

"BUILD a better mousetrap, etc." So they are beginning to wear a path across the lawn of Stephen E. Cochran's front door.

What I mean to say is that word having got about of Impresario Cochran's decision not to attempt a twelfth consecutive season of his National Theater Players this year, on account of the unusually long season of regular road-show bookings at the National, outside interests are beginning to make tempting overtures for his services during the so-called "heated term."

BELL.

For 11 seasons the National Theater Players enjoyed a mounting reputation as one of the foremost resident repertoire companies in the entire United States. Plays of both known and experimental value were staged with all of the completeness and artistry of grade "A" Broadway productions. It was essential, however, that the "little season" at the National be firmly established before the weather became so oppressive as to discourage the theater-going idea in the minds of the public. This season that will not be possible by reason of the remarkable renaissance enjoyed by the theater of the living drama and the prolongation of the so-called legitimate season beyond anything known in the last decade.

That is how it comes about that Mr. Cochran will journey to Philadelphia tomorrow to confer with certain interests there, at their urgent request, with a possible view to taking over the management of the Garden Pier Theater in Atlantic City for the summer. The Garden Pier, standing between the Steel Pier and Heinz', houses the only remaining stronghold of the traditional theater at the Jersey resort. The Apollo, on the Boardwalk at New York avenue, now is a Loew picture house, the Savoy has passed from the Boardwalk scene and the Globe, almost adjacent to the Garden, now houses burlesque during the vacation months. Thus the scene seems to be perfectly set for a useful exercise of the Cochran talents and experience as a showman.

Despite the fact that it seems a fine summertime opportunity for him, it is to be hoped that the old Panjandrum will think twice before abandoning his tentative scheme for a summer theater somewhere just over the District line from the Capital, where it might be possible to present many of the plays that have been banned from Washington by the regrettable restrictions of our punitive child labor laws.

Mr. Cochran already has been "pushed around," as the boys in the back room say, in two sets of negotiations looking to the establishment of a nearby summer theater, but it has been hoped that a third would bear fruitful results. If this rumored dickering comes to no profitable end and Mr. Cochran accepts the Atlantic City offer, Washington still will have to travel to New York to see the "Old Maids," "Children's Hours" and other plays which the authorities feel it has not attained sufficient humanitarianism and intellectual poise to view at home.

• • • •

Something of the affection that I think all of the former members of the National Theater Players feel for the organization that flourished more than a decade on E street is expressed by a recent letter received by Mr. Cochran from Raymond Bramley, popular second lead and character man with the company. Mr. Bramley writes, in part, as follows: "Dear Steve: What with Easter here, naturally my thoughts keep turning to Washington. Late bookings, I understand, have prevented your having a Stock this season. Well, Steve, if you miss it as I do, you have some tug at your heart. It hasn't just meant a job with me. I have loved Washington from my first visit and with each season that love has increased . . . I've been with all the good ones and most of the 'big shots' here in New York, and my hat is off to you . . . So thanks, Steve, for some of the happiest experiences I have had in the theater. Success and happiness to you always and may I have the pleasure of working for you again."

That, I take it, might quite as well have been signed by every player who has appeared with the company through the last ten years. And the public might have scribbled down a few names, too.

It is definitely announced from the Warner Brothers executive offices that "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" will continue its record-breaking, downtown run as chief feature of the screen bill at the Metropolitan Theater, beginning today. "Rhodes, the Empire Builder" having fallen something short of expectations—as was reflected in these columns upon the occasion of its opening—was taken off last night. With Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur in the pivotal roles, "Mr. Deeds" furnishes further evidence that Director Frank Capra seemingly never makes a mistake.

• • • •

At the same time, of course, it becomes known that "The Great Ziegfeld" will sail through a second and final week of capacity business at the National—two performances a day, all seats reserved. This is something more than a mere picture—it is an experience.

• • • •

There seems to have been a slight confusion of dates in the matter of Ted Fio-Rito's appearance with his orchestra on the stage of the Earle Theater. Instead of opening there a week from today, May 1, Fio-Rito and his radio artists will not arrive on Thirteenth street until a week later—Friday, May 8. This is said to have been the date of the booking from the outset, somebody having read it with eyes that mistook an "8" for a "1", of all things. I trust, for the sake of the Warner boys and girls, that those eyes never get into the paymaster's office!

Quick work was done on the Moose River mine rescue by Paramount News. In their newsreel releases on the screen yesterday morning was a 200-foot "clip" of the rescue that represented unusually speedy distribution of pictures of an event that did not occur until Wednesday midnight. The views were shown at yesterday's first performances at both the Earle and Metropolitan theaters.

Opera-Players

"LUANA." The Opera-Players Club of the Immaculate Conception Church presents the operetta in three scenes, written and composed by Harry Wheaton Howard, who also staged the production and played the piano accompaniment. In the parish hall April 21, 23, and 24. Reviewed Thursday evening by W. A. Whitney.

As its twenty-fifth, semiannual production, the Opera-Players Club of the Immaculate Conception Church is offering a colorful Hawaiian operetta, "Luana," written and composed by Harry Wheaton Howard.

Staged in one act, preceded and followed by short and virtually superfluous scenes, the operetta unfolds the story of a mixed marriage which brings down the ire of Pelee, the dreaded goddess supposedly dwelling in the crater of Kilauea. A plain tale of human affairs confounded by superstition and a volcano in travail, "Luana" is simple and straightforward. It savors strongly of Richard Walton Tully's "Bird of Paradise."

Yet the homely simplicity and the tragic beauty of the play is frequently marred by the intrusion of songs, which, however pleasing by themselves, nevertheless break the continuity of the narrative and smash the fragile illusion of the drama.

In the various numbers, Prof. Howard has revealed many moods and tempos and, while many selections have a distinct Sullivanian lilt and otherwise befit their several positions, he has wisely interpolated and ethereally lovely "Aloha" as his climactic song.

While one can for the most part unreservedly applaud the creative efforts of Prof. Howard, the cast cannot be so commended. The music, while not requiring great talents, seemed, none the less, to be beyond the complete grasp of the opera players.

The title role was played by Agnes Dowd, with William T. Hannan appearing opposite. John Charles Quigley was the native lad in love with Luana and Marie Veronica Nolte, Mr. Hannan's one-time fiancee. Other principals included Catharine Ryan, John Sherman, George Yocum, Fred Brown and Richard Townsend.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, April 23.

Clark Gable and Jean Harlow are riding in a taxi in the flicker "Wife vs. Secretary," and snow can be seen on the street through the rear window of the cab, writes Martin Kissane.

GAYNOR.

Miss Harlow and Gable visit the weekly publication owners and start the return trip in a taxi. Now, through the rear window of the cab, bushes and trees in full foliage can be seen. "It surely didn't take several months and complete change of seasons for the trip," comments Kissane.

"In a scene in 'The Song and Dance Man,'" says Marion Chespak, "the switchboard operator is talking into a board transmitter. Another flash, and she is wearing the operator's set. Then another scene, and the operator is back to the board transmitter. I should notice this," comments Marion, "for I have to wear one all day."

E. D. Lambright is amazed by the manner in which Jan Kiepura and Gladys Swarthout handle the musical compositions they have never seen before in the flicker "Give Us This Night." They sing the songs perfectly after one glance at the sheet.

But it is Mae West, in "Klondike Annie," who puzzles Hilda Howard. Hilda wants to know how Mae could get into the same dress that slim Helen Jerome Eddy wore!

Gary Cooper, in the flicker "Desire," is standing in the road getting ready to snap a picture of himself, when Marlene Dietrich speeds past in her car and splashes him generously with mud and water. Nevertheless, claims Arthur Murray, Cooper remains absolutely dry, and when he catches up with Miss Dietrich at the Spanish border, there isn't a spot on his suit.

In the flicker "Forced Landing," writes S. Rabekoff, Onslow Stevens, Willard Robertson, Toby Wing and others are seen boarding a plane for California. It is a low-wing transport. When the plane is shown in the storm, it is a high-wing plane, with the wings above the cabin. When the plane lands at the emergency field, it is again a low-wing monoplane, the same ship that took off. The studios should match their stock shots better. They don't believe the movie fans will notice these minute details, but they do.

Helen Lynd, that clever stage comedienne, writes: "In 'Small Town Girl,' Robert Taylor and Janet Gaynor are speeding about 60 miles an hour, and Gaynor doesn't wear a hat. But, even while the car is speeding, her hair doesn't get mussed or even blown about. So I had Al—you remember my husband, Al Melnick—put the top down and we drove 30 miles an hour and my hat was on, and still my hair got mussed, proving either my hair is softer or we have a different breeze in the East."

Jean Hersholt, in the flicker "The Country Doctor," is rolling on the floor with the quintuplets. "For a few seconds they photograph the babies tipping the chairs over," writes George Dinine. "Hersholt is rolling on the floor, with the babies climbing over him. The scene changes for a moment to the nurse, hurrying to Hersholt. When she comes into the room Jean Hersholt hasn't moved from his position on the floor, yet all the chairs are lined up in front of the wall. Now, some one picked up those chairs when no one was looking—and it wasn't the quintuplets."

Ginger Rogers in "Follow the Fleet," in the dance hall sequence, sings the song into a microphone that is two shaded, claims William Lang. In one flash the mike is white, and in another it is a dark microphone.

In the flicker "Modern Times," says Ruth Bruckner, Charlie Chaplin reads a newspaper headline stating that the Jetson Mills are to reopen. Chaplin gets a job there, and after a few hours a strike is called. In a tussel with the police in front of the mills, a sign can be seen which reads: "Gas Works."

"I went to se Charlie Chaplin in 'Modern Times,'" writes Jack Hoffman, "in order to join your Movie Boners Club. It was the first picture I had seen in several years, and as I am not very observant, I was unable to detect any flaws.

"However, the picture failed to please me, and I made a boner myself by going to see it. I wonder if this would qualify me for membership?" Consider yourself a member, Jack.

Spring Concert Plans Arranged By Choral Unit

Program to Be Presented in Continental Hall on May 5.

Arrangements for the spring concert May 5 of the Washington Choral Society in Memorial Continental Hall were perfected at a meeting of the advisory committee Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe. Myron W. Whitney was appointed president to succeed James P. Schick, who was obliged to resign because of other duties.

Louis A. Potter, director of the chorus, reported that the following organizations are planning to attend the concert: Chevy Chase Women's Club, Civitan Club, Calvary Church Choir and the District Chapter of the American Guild of Organists. Other groups co-operating are the Friday Morning Music Club, the George Washington University Music Appreciation Club and the choir of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church.

The Washington Choral Society is composed of 100 singers from various church choirs. Since its recent organization, it has presented portions of Bach's "Christmas Oratorio" and Haydn's "The Seasons," and has participated in programs of the National Symphony Orchestra.

At the spring concert the society will sing Grieg's "Landsighting," Beethoven's "Elegy," a group of Russian choruses by Balakirev, Chesnokov, Pavlov and Taneiev, and a group of madrigals and part songs by Gibbons, MacFarren, Cole, Gevaert and Brockway. As an instrumental interlude, Mr. Potter and the Pro Musica String Quartet will play Dvorak's quintet for piano and strings.

Tickets for the concert may be obtained from the secretary, Mrs. Miriam Hilton, 3900 Connecticut avenue, or from the office of the society, 831 Eighteenth street northwest.

Missing Minister's Family Wait Word

Frostburg, Md., April 23 (AP).—The family of the Rev. G. D. Sampson awaited further word tonight from the minister, first reported missing on a trip by boat to Norfolk and then reported saved.

The Rev. Mr. Sampson called his son, Harold, a student at State Teachers College, to tell him he and his party had turned back from the projected trip down the Chesapeake Bay. The call came after friends in Norfolk, worried by the minister's nonarrival, had asked the Coast Guard to search for him.

The Rev. Mr. Sampson left a church in MountSa vage, Md., Sunday after conducting services. He went to Pearson, Md., in St. Marys County and joined another son, the Rev. Paul Sampson. The two ministers, with three other friends, then set out down the bay in a flat-bottomed sailboat equipped with an outboard motor.

Parent-Teacher Group Honors Police Officer

Capt. Richard Mansfield, of the Ninth Precinct, was presented with a membership in the Wheatley Parent-Teacher Association for "outstanding service" in the Northeast section of the city, at the annual meeting of the executive board yesterday afternoon.

Twenty-one officers and chairmen of the association were guests of the board, which heard Mrs. Edna Rawlings, president of the Wheatley association, speak.

Authorities in Accord on Film Plays' Realism

Lawyer and Artist Testify to Accuracy of Scenes on Local Screens.

The professor of criminal law at a well-known Washington law school has gone on record with his class on the subject of the courtroom scene in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," the Frank Capra production, starring Gary Cooper and beginning a second downtown week at the Metropolitan Theater today.

Sharpster lawyers in the film have endeavored to separate Mr. Deeds (Cooper) from his $20,000,000 legacy on the grounds that the young man from Mandrake Falls is "pixilated"—or balmy. How Mr. Deeds wins his acquittal provides the most exciting and entertaining moments in the whole hilarious picture.

"The way the trial is conducted in 'Mr. Deeds' is almost unbelievably accurate," to quote the local authority, who had been asked by one of his students to explain the procedure in such a case. "If you saw the picture, then you have an excellent idea of an actual case of the kind."

Some Have Doubted.

While enjoying the sequence to the utmost, some Washingtonians who have seen the film have questioned the possibility of the hearings taking place in any such form as is pictured. Now comes official approval for the way "Judge" H. B. Warner conducts the case.

That the scene is correct in every way is no surprise to those familiar with the work of Director Frank Capra, whose attention to detail is well known in the moving picture industry. "Broadway Bill," Capra's last previous production, revealed the same attention to facts, winning that film the unquestioned title of the best race horse story ever screened.

Illustrator Approves.

"I feel certain that every essential quality in the story is being brought to life on the screen," stated McClelland Barclay, noted artist, in speaking of Walter Wanger's film version of Faith Baldwin's magazine serial, "The Moon's Our Home," now at Loew's Fox.

Barclay, who did the illustrations for "The Moon's Our Home" when it ran in serial form, spent some time at the Wanger studios in Hollywood.

"A better person couldn't have been found than Margaret Sullavan to portray the tempermental screen actress heroine," said Barclay. "Henry Fonda and Charles Butterworth are excellent types for the young author and frustrated lover, respectively."

Having visited few movie sets before, the illustrator was impressed with the infinite care taken by Director William Seiter in making each scene.

"The sets, too, conform perfectly with the ideas I had while illustrating the story. If he hadn't denied the fact to me personally, I would have been sure that Alexander Toluboff had my illustrations in mind when he designed them."

Conferees Agree On 165,000 Army

By the Associated Press.

Congressional conferees on the War Department appropriation bill reached an agreement yesterday on the record peace-time bill, which retained the Senate provision for an enlisted Army strength of 165,000 men as against 147,000 in the House bill.

Senate additions of $58,000,000 for rivers and harbors improvements were cut to $21,000,000.

The $37,000,000 cut in the rivers and harbors items was accomplished by reducing a $50,000,000 lump sum to $15,000,000 and eliminating $2,000,000 for the Bluestone Reservoir in West Virginia.

Senator Copeland said the conferees restored the House total of $8,518,995 for seacoast defenses which the Senate had cut to $1,793,994. A total of $3,915,591 would go for improving harbor defenses on the Pacific Coast; $3,379,511 for Hawaii, and $1,223,892 for the Panama Canal.

A provision was written into the Army enlisted strength section declaring enlistments should be not less than 1,500 a month.

Copeland said the total of the bill had been cut to $572,678,000, around budget estimates, as compared with the $611,000,000 approved by the Senate.

Jane Scarlett Wins Limited Divorce

Jane Cooke Scarlett's runaway romance with George Stanton Scarlett 3d, her family's former chauffeur, a love that died almost as suddenly as it bloomed, was given an official burial in District Supreme Court yesterday.

Justice Joseph W. Cox granted the socialite daughter of the late Howard DeWalden Cooke a limited divorce which, under District of Columbia law, may be enlarged into an absolute divorce in two years. The grounds were cruelty.

Before granting her suit, Justice Cox heard the pretty 19-year-old girl lay bare the details of a ten-day marital career.

Visibly saddened by the death of her father about a week ago, Mrs. Scarlett told of the secret honeymoon journey into the South. On the trip, she charged, Scarlett was "very brutal."

Back in Washington when Mrs. Scarlett went to live with her aunt, Mrs. Alice L. Madigan, in the Broadmoor Apartments, Scarlett cursed loudly and pushed her against a chair with such violence that the chair and a bird cage were overturned, she charged.

In Revival of Twain Fantasy

One of the late Will Rogers' most successful starring vehicles was the Fox picturization of Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," in which Myrna Loy was cast in the principal feminine role. That imaginative picture now is revived as chief screen feature for the week beginning today at RKO-Keith's. Rogers and Miss Loy, currently appearing also in "The Great Ziegfeld," at the National, are pictured above in a characteristically whimsical scene from the film version of one of Twain's cleverest flights of fancy.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Manhattan Promenade.

New York, April 23.

Two former heavyweight champions of the world hot-spotting last night . . . At Leon and Eddie's, listening intently to the waiters singsonging their replies to Eddie Davis, was Max Schmeling, who won his title sitting down, lost it standing up . . . At the Stork Club, Gene Tunney with Bernard Gimbel and Publisher Dan Mahoney . . . Of the two, Tunney is undoubtedly the happier, because how much enjoyment can Schmeling get out of night clubs, when he knows that on June 18 he walks the last mile of resin through the little green door of pugilism to face the thunderbolts of Massa Joe Louis? . . . That is a discouraging prospect, viewed in any light, but Schmeling seemed to be enjoying himself thoroughly . . . Now and then, he ducked his head to avoid the lethal fumes of Joe Jacobs' cigar that burned brightly in the semi-darkness, as Davis sang of things and stuff that we enjoy on W. Fifty-second street.

TUNNEY.

* * * *

Tunney looks to be in great shape, and shaking hands with him, I couldn't refrain from, the thought that here indeed was a credit to the rough art of sluggery . . . He knew what he wanted and he achieved it . . . To get it, he had to punch Jack Dempsey out of the way, and Dempsey wasn't the accommodating type . . . In two fights, they grossed exactly $4,545,723 . . . Rickard, who got a nice slice out of this golden windfall, died comparatively broke, and the last time I heard of his wife, she was pawning trinkets to take care of the baby, who must be a pretty big girl now . . . Tunney and Dempsey both weathered the depression, and are wealthy.

* * * *

Seeing Bernard Gimbel and Tunney calls to mind this: Oddest story to pop up in some time was acted out in the stockholders' meeting of a nationally famous organization not many hours ago . . . The chairman of the board expected trouble from one of the stockholders, feared that it might take the form of physical violence when the meeting convened . . . What to do? Keenest minds in New York racked their brains for the solution to the curious emergency . . . One of them telephoned Police Commissioner Valentine, asked for a certain detective . . . The detective rushed to the meeting . . . The feared stockholder appeared and his entrance was spectacular . . . Two bodyguards, with holsters strapped to their hips, were on either side of him . . . In this militant setting, the meeting was acted out . . . The detective was Johnny Broderick.

* * * *

Little Old New York occasionally rebels as the night clubs invade the side streets . . . On West Fifty-second street, for instance, where the brownstone fronts once housed the town gentlefolk, 20 night clubs now are raucous occupants . . . No. 36, however, still has two genteel trees in front, the only trees on the block . . . At midnight, you see the owner arriving, a bewhiskered, Southern colonel type . . . I believe he is one of the Rhinelanders, who refused to be driven out of his city home by "swing" music.

* * * *

Broadway gets to know the celebs of the police department . . . Broderick is one of them, a fearless, two-fisted guy, who asks for no quarter and gives none . . . He lives up to the movie conception of a strong-arm detective . . . Inspector Kear, who has been praised by grim, taciturn Commissioner Valentine for his fine work in solving the Nancy Titterton murder, is more of the Dashiell Hammett type of sleuth . . . He is scholarly in appearance, tall, wiry, given to smiling . . . Hoodlums fear that smile more than they fear cold steel or a rubber hose . . . He was probably smiling that pleasant, scary smile when he charged John Fiorenza with murder . . . Kear gave him just enough rope to hang himself, exactly 13 inches.

Sherman Billingsley was rushing his wife to the hospital when the elevator stuck, between floors . . . The Billingsleys, the elevator operator and another man were the only passengers . . . "But you've got to do something," screamed the distraught Billingsley, "I'm going to be a father" . . . "I can't do a thing," protested the elevator operator . . . "I can," said the other passenger . . . "If the worst comes to the worst, I'm a doctor" . . . But the elevator decided to co-operate with Sir Stork and went back into commission as suddenly as it had quit . . . The young lady's name is Barbara.

New York streets are crowded with telegraph messengers . . . It's a bit different in small towns, where a telegram is an Event, bearing tidings of great distress or great happiness . . . In a small town, when a telegram is delivered, neighbors watch through the windows anxiously . . . Or they drop in casually a few minutes later, to learn whether the yellow or blue envelope calls for consolation or congratulations . . . In either event, the occasion calls for a cup of tea and other small town pleasantries . . . But in New York, a telegram is as common as a telephone call . . . The emotional thrill of a telegram is reserved for the small town.

Among sillies, I like Willie Howard's parody on the Communist's harangue: "Comes the revolution and we'll have strawberries," says Willie . . . "But I don't like strawberries," protests a comrade . . . "Comes the revolution and you'll eat strawberries," thunders Howard...

Famous Decatur House to Open Today to Aid Symphony's Fund

Mrs. Beale, Owner of Home, Tells Interesting Story of Judah P. Benjamin, One of Former Occupants Described as "American Disraeli."

By Dudley Harmon.

When I walked into Decatur House yesterday, Mrs. Truxton Beale, the owner, and Mrs. Tracy Dows were enmeshed in white ribbon with which they were taping some of the antique chairs and sofas in preparation for this afternoon's opening of the house for the benefit of the National Symphony Orchestra Association. Then they hung on the walls of a small room on the second floor the original plans of this historic house, drawn by Benjamin Latrobe, architect of the Capitol and St. John's Church across the way. This is the first time these plans have been shown to the public.

Mrs. Beale, who is writing a book about the many distinguished persons who once resided in the house where she and her husband now live, told me many interesting stories about the former occupants. The history of Judah P. Benjamin, the American Disraeli, especially appealed to me, perhaps because he made and lost several fortunes with an amazing nonchalance and rapidity, and also because he was one of the few Americans ever to practice law with outstanding success at the English bar.

Benjamin, who was born in the West Indies, married a beautiful New Orleans girl whom he tutored in English in exchange for lessons in French. Later he was United States Senator from Louisiana and afterward Secretary of State for the Confederacy. Following the victory of the Union forces, he fled to England, established his wife and daughter in Paris, and lived a bachelor life in London as a law student. The large fortune he gained before the bar he gave in its entirety to his daughter as her dowry when she married a Frenchman, and set to work to make another one. He was called the American Disraeli not only because he was a contemporary of the great prime minister, but also because he, too, was a Jew, with something of Disraeli's fire and eloquence.

Decatur House was the scene of brilliant entertaining in the days when it was the French Legation. Baron Hyde de Neuville, a representative of the most ancient and aristocratic house under the old regime of France, was minister from that country at the time. The Russian Minister to the United States, Baron de Tuyll, also lived there at one time.

Henry Clay occupied Decatur House when he was Secretary of State under John Quincy Adams. Sir Charles Vaughan, British Minister to the United States; George M. Dallas, vice president in the Administration of President Polk; Edward Livingston, Secretary of State under Andrew Jackson, who had the honor of swearing in George Washington as President of the United States, and Edward Fitzgerald Beale, hero of the Mexican War and United States Minister to Austria, were other occupants.

Among those who will pour tea at the opening of Decatur House today are Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Dows and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, all of whom are active in working for the National Symphony.

Hostesses during the two days will be Mrs. Oliver Strunk, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mrs. John Roland Hill, Mrs. Myron Whitney, Mrs. David Craig, Princess Cantacuzene, Mrs. Milton King, Mrs. G. J. Rowcliff, Mrs. Reeve Lewis, Mrs. Emory Scott Land, Mrs. Harold Marsh, Mrs. Barton Yount, Mrs. Carl Droop and Mrs. Hans Kindler, wife of the symphony conductor.

Maj. Gen. John H. Russell, commandant of the Marine Corps, is in charge of the decorations, which will include flags of many kinds. Miss Alice Graeme is chairman of the group of young girls who will serve tea in the garden today and tomorrow.

Greek King's Day Honored By Reception

Many Diplomats Attend Function of Minister Sicilianos.

Cocktail Party Is Given Emden Officers by German Attache.

By Francesca McKenney.

Members of Capital society were busy yesterday afternoon attending a reception and cocktail parties between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock.

The reception was given by the Minister of Greece, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos, in the legation on Twentieth street in celebration of the anniversary of the nameday of King George II. In Greece it is an old religious custom to celebrate on the day of the patron saint for whom one has been named in plabe of celebrating birthdays, as in this country.

The legation, with its oak paneled walls and heavy deep red velvet draperies, was filled with bowls of pink spring flowers. The minister received his guests in the main hall and from there they gathered in the dining room, where the table, also decorated with pink flowers, was laden with sandwiches, cakes and other refreshments.

Diplomats Attending.

Among those who attended the reception were the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Mehmet Munir Ertegun, who was accompanied by the Secretary of Embassy, Mr. Ibrahim Seyfullah; the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, who were accompanied by their daughter, Miss Valerie Prochnik; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland, the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, Senor Dr. Don Rafael Fuentes, and the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi, who were accompanied by the latter's daughter, Mlle. Sibilla Skidelsky, who wore an ensemble of navy blue with a halo hat to match.

Also there were Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, who was in black; Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, the Secretary of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Popovici, the latter in a black and green print frock with a cartwheel black straw hat trimmed with a green bow. Mrs. John P. Jackson wore a black ensemble with a silver fox cape.

Miss Elizabeth Beale, who returned several days ago from Lexington, Ky., wore a black and pink print frock with a large black straw hat trimmed with a perk bunch of pink flowers in the front. Miss Diana Rowland was also there, gowned in a printed frock with a small black hat and a corsage of white orchids tipped with deep purple. Mr. William K. Ryan was another guest.

Emden Officers Feted.

The Naval Attache of the German Embassy, Rear Admiral Wittoeft-Emden, entertained yesterday afternoon at a cocktail party in the Presidential dining room of the Mayflower Hotel in honor of Kapitan Johannes Backmann, who is in command of the German cruiser Emden, and the ship's officers.

Many of the guests at the party noted the coincidence that Admiral Witthoeft should have Emden as part of his name. Admiral Witthoeft was aboard the old Emden when she was sunk during the war, and all survivors of the ship had the name of Emden bestowed upon them and added to their family name.

Admiral Witthoeft and Kapitan Bachmann received their guests at the door of the dining room, which was decorated with spring flowers, pink predominating. The long buffet table had bowls of flowers and red, white and blue candles as well as many baskets made of spun sugar. A large sugar anchor and a chocolate cake decorated with nautical flags attracted attention.

Among those who attended the cocktail party were the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and Marchioness di Sant'Orsloa, the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, Signor Bartolomeo Migone; the Military Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Lombard, the latter wearing a becoming ensemble of pale gray trimmed with gray fox. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Alfred Johnson, Mrs. Harry Baxter, daughter of the Secretary of War, who arrived early and later attended the reception at the Greek Legation, as did Mrs. Campbell Prichett and many others.

Other Guests at Party.

Also there were Mrs. Alex B. Legare, who arrived in the Capital several days ago with Mr. Legare from Summerville, S. C. Mrs. Legare was accompanied by her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver. Mr. and Mrs. James Spear Taylor were chatting with Miss Caroline Thompson. Admiral and Mark Bristol were in the gathering, as were Maj. and Mrs. Parker West. Mrs. Chester A. Snow, jr., Mrs. William T. Mann, who wore a black and pink printed frock with a small off-the-face hat trimmed with small pink flowers. Baroness von Below greeted her many friends during the afternoon, as did Mrs. Frances Wilkinson Bunker, who later went on to the Greek Legation.

Miss Ann Elizabeth Bacon Is Bride of Ralph R. McCoy

Ceremony Is Performed by Dr. Warner in St. Alban's Church; Couple to Live in Chevy Chase After Honeymoon.

Miss Ann Elizabeth Bacon, daughter of Commander Sankey Bacon, of Chevy Chase, Md., was married yesterday at 4:30 p. m. to Mr. Ralph Richard McCoy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman McCoy. The ceremony took place in St. Alban's Church, the Rev. Dr. Charles T. Warner officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a dress of white satin, made on princess lines, with a frock coat with puffed sleeves and a round collar. Her tulle veil was fastened with orange blossoms in coronet style.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Katherine Burdell Ahalt, Jane Caskey, Mary Maxon, Ruth Tennis and Ethel Louise Shamer. All wore dresses of white taffeta, printed with pastel spring flowers, with high standing collars, and hats of white straw with a band of spring flowers around the crown and carried bouquets of spring flowers.

The flower girl, Miss Barbara Jean Taggart, wore an old-fashioned, high-waisted white taffeta dress and a white pique bonnet.

Mr. Horace B. McCoy was best man. The ushers were Mr. James J. Gouldin, Mr. Paul Newland, Mr. John Walstrom and Mr. Ralph Mitchell Kimble.

A reception at the home of the bride followed the ceremony. After a short wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. McCoy will make their home in Chevy Chase.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

I Am Grateful to Those Correspondents Who Are Compassionately Concerned With Others' Problems.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your column has been of great interest to me since my husband and I came to Washington six months ago. "Peg's" letter, which was printed Monday, has been troubling me all morning and I have finally decided to write to you. My husband and I lived for many years in a foreign country whose citizens are hostile to outsiders and for several years, until we came to understand the people, we felt keenly the lack of friends. On our return to the United States we resolved as a result of our own disturbing experience to be more friendly toward everyone.

Mary Haworth.

* * * *

I feel sure that, as you suggested, "Peg" and her husband are living in an uncongenial neighborhood. Everyone we have met here seems so considerate and friendly. We have dozens of acquaintances who accept our invitations and who invite us to their homes. Several of these are developing into deep friendships.

Do you think "Peg" would care to get in touch with me and join our group? My husband also works for the Government at an average salary and most of our friends are in some way connected with the Government service. We have a little girl three and a half years old. On second thought, she might not care for an acquaintanceship so casually made. However, if you think it advisable you may give her my telephone number. I can be reached any morning between 9 and 10 o'clock. Sincerely, Mrs. J. W. H.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. J. W. H.: For my part, I should consider it a privilege to make the acquaintance of a person so truly gracious and considerate as yourself. It seems to me "Peg" may well take the same attitude and accept this opportunity for making new friends. I do not have her name and address, however, and am taking this means of calling your kindly overture to her attention. M. H.

Friends for "Peg."

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: I have just finished reading "Peg's" letter in your column of April 20 and I can heartily sympathize with her. We came here from a Midwestern State and have found it as difficult as she has found it to become acquainted here. Although we have met a great many persons where we work, as well as in the apartment building where we live, we do not have a very wide acquaintance ship even yet, after three years in Washington.

My husband, who works for the Government, as does "Peg's," is 26 and I am 23. I have heard any number of persons say of Washington that it is the most difficult of all cities in the United States in which to find friends.

I should like very much to become a friend of "Peg's," not through curiosity, but for the same reasons she has already outlined.

Sincerely, M. A.

* * * *

DEAR M. A.: I shall be glad to put you in touch with "Peg" if you and she provide me with your respective names and addresses. Until I have that information I can do nothing more than print your communication. M. H.

Age Speaks to Youth.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It may surprise you to know that a middle-aged man sometimes reads and sympathizes with the problems you are invited to solve. The one in The Post Tuesday morning, April 21, especially touched my heart. I congratulate you on the advice you gave "Heartsick." Oh, how my heart goes out in sympathy to her. How well I know the gnawing of a tortured heart. She is 22. So was I just 22 when one day the girl I loved and had loved from childhood decided in favor of a rival whose prospects financially were more promising than mine.

* * * *

We were living in a small town. Diversions were few and the heartsickness which possessed me I could not dispel. It almost consumed me and seemed to increase with the passing days. I felt that life without her was unthinkable. Then I decided to do the thing which you advised "Heartsick" to do. I resigned my job, came to this city, secured a job of an exciting, absorbing type, a job requiring endless study and concentration and found—not a cure, but a great relief; a subduing, so to speak, of my unbearable heartache.

* * * *

Five years later I met and married a sweet girl whom I'm sure I loved, although in a far different manner than the first, and we lived happily together for 13 years, until she died following an operation. For 12 years, the 12 years since I lost her, I have had no other girl, but I have been sustained by memories of the happiness we knew together.

* * * *

Please tell "Heartsick," again, not to despair. Tell her to bury her heart, her bleeding heart, in her work; to cultivate a love of nature; of flowers and singing birds, and to keep a smiling face and laughing eyes, even if her heart is sorely sick. Some day—who knows but that it may be soon?—she will meet and love another. Never again in the same wild, sweet way, perhaps; but in a quieter, softer manner, like moonlight sifting through the branches of the great oak trees and throwing its silver radiance on a pond of water lilies. Sincerely,

C. W. F.

* * * *

DEAR C. W. F.: For "Heartsick's" sake, I am grateful to you for indorsing my advice to her to find work which will force her to live and think and act more objectively. I appreciate more than I can say these occasional letters I receive from correspondents who are willing to bare their own scarred hearts in an effort to show others how to heal their hurts. M. H.

Child Training Calls for Policy Of Consistency

Hopping From One Theory to Another Bewilders the Youngsters.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Every time Mrs. Jones read a new book on bringing up children or on psychology she was converted to the new methods advocated by its author. In the course of time she tried them all on her family. Her children became accustomed to one-night stands in most of the schools of current thought.

Weekly Changes.

One week their diet was mostly spinach and liver; another they were liberally fed with fruit and salad. Perhaps corporal punishment would be in vogue for a few days, and then it was pronounced brutal and humiliating. The first baby she attempted to "condition" by behaviorist precepts; the next was permitted free expression, and the youngest was the experimental subject of half a dozen theoretical schools.

When they were little the children were confused and irritable, for they never knew what to expect, and lived in a state of bewilderment at their mother's unaccountable and kaleidoscopic changes. As they grew older they merely discounted their mother's behavior and paid no attention to her theories or statements.

Common Sense Needed.

"She's read another book," was their usual comment. They loved their mother, but had no respect for her judgments or opinions.

It does not really matter much what method one uses provided one mixes a little common sense with the prescription and considers the children rather than the system. But one cannot change one's methods every day any more than one can change one's medical treatment or one's principles. There must be some consistency, some sense of continuity, in a child's training, if the child is to be emotionally and nervously stable. One's home and parents, at least, must remain unchanged and unchanging in a world of flux.

The Post Offers Five Cash Prizes For Shortcakes

Every part of the country has its own special version of that ever popular dessert—strawberry shortcake. And Washington is just the place to find most of these versions, for there is no city with such a National representation as Washington.

The Post wants your own idea of what constitutes a real strawberry shortcake. Five cash awards will be given to the five women submitting the most interesting recipes. The first award is $5; the second, $3, and the remaining three prizes $1 each.

Send your recipes to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post. Be sure to mail them at once as the contest closes Saturday morning.

Lillian Rock Envisions Woman as President In Not Distant Future; Tells League's Aims

Asserts Her Sex Controls 49 Per Cent of Vote, Deserves Offices.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"I EXPECT that within my own time some brilliant woman will make her way from the ballot box to the Presidency . . . Indeed, I shall be sadly disappointed if within the next decade a woman is not made at least Vice President."

When, in August 1934, Miss Lillian D. Rock made that statement before the National Association of Women Lawyers, at their convention in Chicago, it was flint and steel striking against a tinderbox of response in women throughout the country.

The League for a Woman for President and Other Public Offices is the result. More strongly convinced than ever before that women are progressing toward high executive positions in our Government, Miss Rock—founder and president of the league—believes the problem now is "to educate the public to the fact there is no reason women should not be considered equally with men as candidates for important public offices."

Talks of League's Aims.

In Washington on business, Miss Rock made a Nationwide radio address Wednesday on "Woman's Stake in Peace and Politics." Yesterday at the Dodge Hotel, where she will stay for a few days, she elaborated on the purposes of the league, told why it is particularly needed at this time, and what she hopes it will accomplish not only this election year, but in the years to come.

Miss Rock yesterday looked the part of a successful attorney and organizer that she is. She wore a tailored gray suit set off with brown accessories, her brown felt hat pulled low over her forehead. But trying to talk to Miss Rock about herself, this writer soon found herself discussing Miss Rock's pet project, the league—which obviously interests her more now than the fact she has personally handled more than 5,000 law cases, now heads her own law firm in New York, and is widely known as one of the outstanding women attorneys in the United States.

"What concerns me most now is obtaining for women the representation they deserve as controllers of 49 per cent of the Nation's total vote," she said. "The league itself is the natural outgrowth of the existing system of political inequality. Something had to be done to offset the back-to-the-kitchen movement and to eradicate psychological barriers that have kept women out of most of the choice political offices all these years."

Views Chances Hopefully.

Miss Rock pointed out that more than half a century ago Belva Lockwood, pioneer lawyer and reformer, startled the country when she became a candidate for President. "She had to depend entirely on votes from men," said Miss Rock, "so naturally she didn't get very far. Yet four years later she was on the ticket again, thus proving she was not abashed by one overwhelming defeat. Today, when women constitute almost half the voters, a woman of ability should stand as good a chance as a man."

Just as a home without a woman is no home, so a government in which women are not equally represented with men is no government, in Miss Rock's opinion. "How can we have an ideal country if one-half the human race is not properly represented in important posts in the affairs of State?" she asked.

LILLIAN D. ROCK.

Declares Public Must Be Educated to Equality of All Rights.

The back-to-the-home trend is a man-made movement to get women out of public life, she believes. "The argument on which it is based is, of course, that women should be at home with their children; should be 'protected' from the wear and tear of the business world. Yet how many men have ever openly objected to women doing menial jobs outside the home? How many men insist that every charwoman or waitress should be at home with her babies? It's the woman with a good job who's on the spot. She is the one whom men are attempting to force back to dusting and dishwashing. Men obviously don't object to women working, provided they are willing to work for little pay, or none at all."

In answer to the question, "Why, specifically, do you believe a woman should be elected President of the United States?" Miss Rock had the two-word answer, "Why not?" on the tip of her tongue.

"If a woman can inherit a throne, why can't she win a Presidency?" she went on. "Seventeen years ago women were given the right to vote. What did that mean? That women had the right to go to the polls and vote for men only? Certainly not. Our job now is to remove moth-eaten prejudices against women, to prove that members of our sex can hold offices as high as men. We are already on the way. This very year, we believe, there will be a woman candidate for the Vice Presidency. This very year, there is somewhere in America a woman who will, within 20 years, be the first woman President of the United States."

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

HER FURNITURE is fairly usual, but very nice indeed—eighteenth century mahogany dining room pieces. She doesn't really want anything else either, though she would like to modernize the effect a bit with colors and fabrics and asks for suggestions. The room has an uninteresting mantel.

We know how she feels . . . there's nothing more satisfying through the years than just that sort of furniture. And the nicest part about it is that it is so adaptable to refreshing ideas in accessories and color. Here's what we would do with that room . . . Paint the walls white, the ceiling yellow, then for a change have the moldings, baseboards and Venetian blinds a bright blue. Why not rip out the uninteresting mantel and replace it with a plain wooden molding painted bright blue, too? Then have yellow satin or yellow chintz draperies over the blue Venetian blinds.

A screen covered in silver ground wall paper would make an interesting accent, so would pieces of crystal. Over the mantel she might have an unframed oval mirror, and for the center of the dining table a mirrored plaque with a yellow bowl for flowers or fruit.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Setting the Table With Charm."

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Although her brother, Jerry, forbade her to do it, Ruth Dayton, 18, has accepted a job posing as June Bradley, step-sister of Jim Bradley, wealthy young Chicagoan, who is Ruth's age and who Ruth resembles greatly. Ruth had been persuaded to accept the job by Joe and Clara Bradley, uncle and aunt of Jim, in whose charge June has been placed by her brother.

Ruth had been persuaded by Joe and Clara that their purpose in hiring her was a humane one. June, they told her, was ill and could not go with them to the bedside of Jim, who had been blinded and apparently fatally injured in an auto accident. The deceit, she was told, was to soften the last hours of a dying man.

But in Chicago Ruth has found herself in the midst of a plot. She is convinced that Joe and Clara and Pascoe, the man nurse they establish in charge of Jim, are eager to bring about Jim's death. Ruth falls in love with Jim and he with her, thinking she is June. He has Joe arrange their marriage so June will inherit his estate if he dies but the marriage Joe arranges is a fake one.

Ruth cannot confide her fears to Jim who is too ill. She is held prisoner by the Bradleys and Pascoe. Only Bette, Mrs. Bradley's maid, seems inclined to help her. When she has almost given up hope, Ruth sees her brother, Jerry, who has obtained work in the household as a houseman. He is helping Bette wash dishes accumulated since Clara fired the maids employed by Jim Bradley.

CHAPTER TWENTY.

BETTE REACHED for a kettle of boiling water, spread out her hand to warn Jerry against getting close enough to be spattered by the hot liquid, scalded the dishes.

"I say, how many in the family?"

"I heard you the first time," Bette remarked. "There are three besides Mr. Jim."

"Three children?"

Bette looked at him shrewdly. "What are you trying to do? Act wise?"

"No, I'm trying to get information."

"Well, then, there are three, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, and a girl they call June."

"A girl they call June?" Jerry tried to make his voice sound quite nonchalant. "Do they call her June because that's her name or because it's a pet name or because she was born in June, or what?"

Bette stopped washing dishes, glanced around to make sure that no one could possibly hear. "Say, listen, what are you, a regular sure enough houseman or are you a detective?"

Jerry looked Bette over anxiously. Then, characteristically, came to a swift and sure decision. "Bette, I'm that girl's brother and I'm simply scared to death about her."

Bette crossed swiftly to the door, glanced up and down the corridor. "Is my sister all right?" In spite of himself Jerry's voice trembled.

Bette nodded emphatically. "Yes, She is in no great danger—yet. It's Mr. Jim."

"You mean the sick man isn't going to get well? He's in danger of death?"

"They won't let him get well."

Jerry took that in a flash. "How about Ruth—the girl they call June?"

"Is Ruth her name?"

"Yes. How about her?"

Bette's face was pale. "Listen, they'd kill me if they found out I talked to you."

"They'll not find out. Tell me."

"They're holding her here. Something has happened to the real June—Mr. Jim's foster sister. I don't know what it is. Anyway, they brought your sister here and they're pretending to Mr. Jim that she's June."

"I knew that. But where is she? Why hasn't she written? Are you sure she's all right?"

"She's upstairs. They're keeping her here to help with the pretense that she's his sister. They're forcing her to stay. When he's dead—when they do away with him——"

Suspects.

Jerry could scarcely breathe in his excitement. "Does she suspect, does she realize what is happening?"

"I think she suspects. She ought to suspect. They lock her into her room every night. They may not have told her in so many words that they're keeping her prisoner, but just the same she knows. I tried to help her get away. I risked my neck last night to unlock her door. If Mrs. Bradley found that out, she'd kill me."

"And did my sister try to get away?"

"She tried. Precious lot of good it did her. She was just opening the front door when Pascoe caught her."

"Pascoe? Who is Pascoe?"

"The nurse they've got here taking care of Mister Jim. He really isn't a nurse. He's some kind of a doctor. He used to come to the house out in Denver. I saw him once or twice."

Cook came in. She was a big, good-natured woman—what Bette called "dumb." "Well, that's something like," she said, seeing the great pile of clean, carefully stacked dishes. "That is something like."

Bette and Jerry finished their task in silence. Just outside the door Bette stopped Jerry when he started upstairs.

"Work fast," Bette whispered. "They're up to something. This morning they staged a fake wedding between Mr. Jim and your sister. I don't know what they're up to, but they're not a bunch of common crooks. There's plenty for them to scheme for. Mr. Jim's a millionaire."

In the next half dozen hours Jerry throttled every impulsive plan he had. Clara Bradley may have accepted him wholeheartedly and without suspicion, but the men in the house did not. Wherever he turned, at every move he made, he found the eyes of Pascoe or Joseph Bradley upon him.

Ruth Worries.

Twice Ruth made the trip down the corridor to stay in the sick man's room for a few minutes. She was escorted each time, and although they permitted her to enter the room alone, either Pascoe or Joseph Bradley kept close watch just outside.

Ruth, of course, knew this. But she was worried that Jerry did not get into communication with her.

She wos worried, too, about Jim. Jim seemed stronger, but he was in a fretful, nervous mood. She wondered how much she should say to him. He was worried most of all about his attorneys.

"Why haven't they come? Uncle Joe told me he'd call Reagan and Reagan right away. But why doesn't he do it? He keeps putting me off."

"If you don't get well, Jim dear," Ruth whispered quite truthfully, "then nothing in all the world will ever matter to me again."

"You love me?" Jim wanted her to say the three sweet words over and over again.

"I love you, Jim, I love you."

"I've been thinking, dear, about that last morning in Colorado.

"Yes, dear"—it always hurt to have Jim mention a time when she had not known him. Somehow it always brought very clearly to Ruth the enormity of her mistake. Jim was in love with the girl he thought her to be—in love with the beautiful, capricious June Bradley, not with an obscure girl who worked in a department store and came to him just to make believe.

Jim held her to him very closely. "I'm thinking about that last morning in Colorado," he repeated, "when we went up into the mountains."

"Yes," Ruth said softly.

"You had on a little white knitted suit. It had pink roses on it—didn't it?"

"Yes."

"And you were bareheaded? The sun almost made you appear redheaded."

"Yes, dear."

"We drove a long way. Up to the very top of the pass."

"Yes, dear."

"And up where we could get out of the car and gaze down over a snowy cliff into summer, thousands of feet below, you told me that you—that you loved Carleton. Dear, have you forgotten?"

"I haven't forgotten," Ruth said slowly.

"Sweetheart, did you mean it? I've been lying here all afternoon wondering. Did you mean that, that day?"

"No, I didn't mean it, Jim. I didn't mean it."

Jim lay very still. Spoke at last slowly, the shadow of pain in his eyes. "Dear, I wonder? I didn't seem to care then. Of course, I had a minute's pang that my little sister loved some other chap. It proved you were grown-up. But I didn't seem to mind—very much. You see, I'm fond of Carleton."

"I didn't love him then. I don't love him now," Ruth repeated. "I love only you. Jim—only you—in all the world."

Jim's face was filled with quiet happiness. "I was afraid, sweetheart, that you married me because you felt sorry for me, that you—"

"I married you," Ruth told him, "because I love you with all my heart and soul, because I'll never love any other man." His eager lips closed over hers.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Healing a Duodenal Ulcer.

EVERY ONE who develops an ulcer in the upper part of the digestive tract, for example, the duodenum, cannot go to bed and subject himself to ideal hospital care. Furthermore, it is not always necessary or desirable. In other words, a fair number of these patients who do not show signs of bleeding may be permitted, under minor restrictions, to carry on their regular vocations. So much can be done for them that even under conditions of considerable activity healing can and will take place in many instances.

In a recently published series of cases the comparative figures were about the same as though the patients had been confined to bed. Twenty-six per cent were free from symptoms, apparently cured two years after the diagnosis had been established. Forty-two per cent were relieved of all but the most insignificant complaints, while 24 per cent showed but moderate improvement. In only 8 per cent was there no change. Although these figures may be regarded as unsatisfactory, yet the results are much the same as would have been obtained had the same group of patients been subjected to expert hospital management.

Symptoms Come and Go.

As has been pointed out repeatedly in this column, a peptic (stomach or duodenal) ulcer is a local manifestation of a constitutional disease. In addition, the symptoms come and go. Nevertheless, if the patient is intelligent, and if he can be instructed as to the character and general progress of the disease, the first step in cure will have been taken. If undue fatigue, infection, and mental upsets can be avoided recovery will proceed with fair certainty. In a group of cases cited by a New York physician symptoms of ulcer reappeared in 20 per cent subsequent to emotional excitement, worry or grief; in 25 per cent after overfatigue, and in 16 per cent following infections.

While hemorrhages and perforations can and do occur, they will not exhibit themselves in the majority of cases and surgery need not be invoked until after medical treatment has had a fair trial.

For these up and about patients Bassler recommends no solid food whatsoever for the first month. A liquid diet is prescribed in suitable portions every three or four hours during the day. The objective is to keep the stomach so supplied with food that the hydrochloric acid in the gastric juice will be used up and, hence be unable to irritate the ulcer. Basically, the diet contains four substances: 1, eggs; 2, fresh milk and cream; 3, water, and 4, well cooked cereals with bread or crackers. The eggs are taken raw or cooked, and the milk should be warm, not hot. Ready prepared breakfast foods are not used.

The total quantity of food in one day consists of four eggs, one quart of milk, a quarter of a pound of fresh unsalted butter, four medium thick slices of bread, a half pint of fresh cream and a quarter of a pound of cereal (weighed before cooking).

Sleep Regulated.

The second 30 days consists of four meals—the first at 8 a. m. and the last at 8 p. m. They are made up of plain milk, cream, soups, crackers, ground or mashed vegetables, puddings and any form of gelatine. After three to six months the diet is far more general, including meat (or fish if desired) once a day, eggs prepared in any manner other than fried, well-cooked cereal, vegetables and dessert.

Patients are instructed to report at once should any symptoms arise, and to have a checkup by the physician at frequent intervals. Twelve hours in bed is the rule for the first month, 11 hours the second, gradually decreasing the time to a minimum of eight hours. In most instances alkalies will be required to neutralize the excess hydrochloric acid in the stomach, and no exercise other than walking is allowed for the first three months.

Under this plan pain usually subsides within a week or so and the patient may feel so well by the end of the first or second month that great difficulty is often encountered in compelling him to adhere to the diet. The moral effect of requiring the patient to aid in directing his own case is most salutary.

Women Golfers Wear Rain Proof Clothing

Today's race of hardier femininity isn't being balked by a little wet weather. Women golfers wear oil silk jackets to slip over their suede coats or sweaters. Swimmers wear oil skin culottes or shorts to keep wet suits from ruining the car while driving home from the beach. Sailors and fisherwomen like oil silk trousers to protect them from the sea spray.

Individualism Is Outstanding In Simple Print

INDIVIDUALISM is attributed to the buttoned-up shoulders in this smart crepe print. It's a brand-new detail that makes you feel very young. The caped sleeves give important wide shoulder-line that makes your waist look slim. There's a panel effect at the front of the skirt to give a youthful height. Cotton prints with interesting new rough finish are perfect for this simple-to-sew dress for summer.

Deaf Children Often Introverts

Deaf children are often introverted and poorly adjusted, it was learned through a survey conducted by Dr. Roudolf Pintner, of Teachers College, Columbia University, with the assistance of WPA research workers.

After observing over 2,000 deaf children in New York City schools, Dr. Pintner said he found them more subject to fears and less well-adjusted emotionally than pupils with normal hearing. A more detailed study will be made, he revealed to discover what effect different degrees of deafness have on the personality.

When the analysis is completed a program of training to enable partly deaf children to adjust themselves more favorably to their environment will be undertaken, he said.

Hazen Asks Aids to Help Check Noise

Commissioner Urges All City Departments to Co-operate.

Utilities to Be Requested to Improve Equipment for Quietness.

Co-operation of various District departments and the Public Utilities Commission in the efforts of the special antinoise committee to reduce the noises of the National Capital was asked in memoranda sent to the commission and Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, father of the antinoise movement.

Water, sewer, electrical and highway departments having to do with manhole covers were asked to fix loose covers so they would not rattle when vehicles passed over them.

The utilities commission was asked to put pressure on the utilities companies to do the same thing about their manhole covers and to persuade the car companies and others to improve their equipment and eliminate noisy crossovers and vehicles.

Vernon E. West, acting corporation counsel, was asked to draft a special regulation forbidding the blowing of automobile horns between 11 p. m. and 7 a. m., except by police, fire, ambulances and other emergency vehicles when responding to emergency calls. The regulation was proposed by William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic and antinoise committee chairman, because the present law forbidding blowing of horns except as a "reasonable warning" is violated constantly.

The new regulation is to become effective on July 1, if the Board of Commissioners approves the proposal. Violators would be subject to the general penalty provisions of the traffic law. Under these a person might be sent to jail for ten days, or might be fined as much as $300, or sent to jail for as much as a year if a fine were not paid.

Existing laws against nuisances are to be employed against loud radios and other noisemakers, crying vendors and of newsboys, and other noises, it was said.

Prior to launching a campaign of arrests, however, an educational campaign seeking general co-operation of the public will be conducted, Commissioner Hazen said.

Another meeting of the committee is to be held within a week or ten days, Van Duzer said.

The new school of thought on automobile horns, which holds that these devices ought to be silent at night found two vigorous opponents yesterday in Magistrates George Eckhardt, jr., and Donald P. Roman, of the traffic court in Baltimore.

Magistrate Eckhardt, while his colleague nodded approval, said he felt that a good dependable horn was just as necessary to a motorist as a set of brakes.

And any absolute ban on the blowing of a horn, he added, would certainly do nothing to promote safety.

Lots of people are still on the streets after 11 p. m., he added, and some of them probably owe their lives to the fact that horns are blowable.

Mrs. Norton Seeks Ballot for District

Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee and stanch champion of District representation in Congress, yesterday announced she would carry her fight to the Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia.

Mrs. Norton, who is a delegate from New Jersey, said she will try first to persuade Democratic leaders to include a proposal for a constitutional amendment to grant the District national representation in the party platform.

Failing in this, she will ask that the party go on record as favoring a law permitting the residents of the District to have a delegate in the House, as proposed by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

Mrs. Norton is co-author with Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, of a joint resolution calling upon Congress to authorize a vote by the country on a constitutional amendment granting the franchise to residents of Washington.

Child Teaches Self To Count With Ball

Karl Huth Solves Own Problems at the District Neighborhood House.

Got It.

Karl Huth may hold the pre-kindergarten championship for ball-bouncing at the Neighborhood House, 470 N street southwest, but in reality he's the champion counter in the class.

Karl can count up to 20—provided he can bounce the big red ball at the same time.

To his other 3-or-4-year-old classmates, Karl keeps the ball bouncing up and down longer than any of them but to his teacher, Miss Carolyn Mathews, this means that he has learned his numbers better than any other child.

This easy method of counting was worked out unconsciously by the child and it has been adopted since then for the others. Karl, it seems, had difficulties learning to count. Then the teacher gave him a big red ball. Karl could bounce it three times in succession and count "one-two-three." Gradually he has mounted to 20 by his self-taught method.

And Karl has won this distinction against the competition of 37 others in the class.

Some of these come each day Higher.

with a nickel clutched in their fists to give to the teacher for their morning of supervised play, their midsession refreshment of milk and crackers and their hot luncheon at noon before they return home. Those whose parents are unable to afford the 5 cents are paid for by the Community Chest, from which the house gets its main support. With the exception of a few dollars raised in each of the many departments of the Neighborhood House, the work is carried on by Chest funds.

Mothers Work.

The pre-kindergarten class is for the children of mothers employed in the neighborhod. In the afternoons they are cared for by neighbors or older brothers and sisters.

There's another undertaking in the house for the children of women who help support their families. The day nursery has about two dozen youngsters from six months to a year who are cared for during the entire day. They are bathed, fed and given afternoon naps each day while their mothers are employed.

In the center of the group of buildings comprising the house is a garden with an open-air theater. Here Karl and his classmates are given nature lessons every sunny morning. They are old acquaintances of the pair of cardinals building a nest in a tree in the garden and they know all the flowers in bloom.

But the real treat of the day is when they can walk to the nearby wharves and watch the boats. The boats are their main interest, but the real reason for taking them out, Miss Mathews said, is to teach them caution by showing them how to cross streets carefully.

Many Accidents.

"There are so many accidents in this neighborhood we felt we ought to teach the children to be careful on the streets," she said. "In fact, one little girl in the class is now in the hospital recuperating from an automobile accident. I always insist the children must be brought to and taken from class by some older brother or sister, if the parents cannot do it."

All kinds of boys and girls clubs flourish in the house; manual training groups, painting, weaving, knitting, Girl and Boy Scouts and many others. The house has inaugurated a system whereby the children may pay for the materials they use in their work by doing work for the institution to be sold at the annual fete.

The thirty-fourth annual spring festival will be held May 14, 15 and 16, and each child is doing something to contribute to it. Those who cannot make costumes or learn parts for the play are running errands and doing odd jobs.

The selection of the May Queen is now the great topic of conversation, for this honor goes to the girl whom the staff of nine votes has done most for the house during the year in the way of work and good will. But the lucky girl is not told of the honor until an hour before the performance in which she is crowned.

Suspect Arrested For Counterfeiting

Nicholas Passero, 42, alias "Bull Montana," was arrested last night by Detective Sergt. Charles Mansfield in connection with the passing of counterfeit $5 and $10 bills in Washington and nearby Maryland.

Mansfield said he picked up Passero, who gave his address as 225 E street northwest, at the request of the Secret Service. Passero, he said, would be given a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage today.

The detectives said the Secret Service was seeking several persons alleged to be members of a gang of counterfeit passers active here in recent weeks.

Gas Light Purchase Of Bonds Approved

Approval of the Washington Gas Light Co.'s request for permission to acquire $1,335,000 in general mortgage bonds of the Georgetown Gas Light Co., the Washington Gas Light Co., of Montgomery County, the Georgetown Gas Light Co. of Montgomery County, the Rosslyn Gas Co. and the Prince Georges Gas Corporation was granted yesterday by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The acquisition, said the commission, "will serve the public interest by tending toward the economical and efficient development of an integrated public utility system."

Mrs. Sylvester's talk will be illustrated by a group of chorals by Madrigal Singers.

Maid of Binghams Reported Missing

Former Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, asked police yesterday to aid in the search for Freda Anna Schaller, 25-year-old maid, who disappeared Monday from the Bingham home, 2604 Thirty-first street northwest.

Police were told the young woman recently suffered a nervous breakdown and had appeared despondent since that time. She has been with the Binghams two years.

She was described as "heavy set" with brown eyes and bobbed hair, wearing a blue suit, tan hat and blouse.

Meanwhile, police continued their efforts to locate Miss Virginia C. Mulvey, 26, stenographer in the Labor Department, who disappeared from her apartment at 2428 Nineteenth street northwest April 17.

Richard Simmons, 3032 Sixteenth street northwest, the woman's fiance, told police she took few belongings and gave no indication where she was going.

Benet Sails for U. S.; Plans D. C. Residence

Col. Lawrence V. Benet, retired general manager of the Hotchkiss Machine Gun Manufacturing Co., sailed yesterday from Cherbourg on the steamship Washington. He is returning to this country to take up permanent residence in Washington.

Following a long and distinguished career, which included military service as an ensign during the Spanish-America War, and three years of work with the ambulance and hospital service during the World War, Col. Benet made his home in Paris, where he had lived in recent years. A graduate of Emerson Institute, of Washington, he spent much of his time in this city and was married here in 1899.

New Transit Merger Plan Given P. U. C.

Proposal Covers Terms Fixed by Commission; Approval Expected.

Present Fares of Bus Firm to Continue With Transfers.

The Capital Transit Co. submitted to the Public Utilities Commission yesterday a new proposal covering its purchase of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., conforming to terms and conditions laid down by the commission last week.

Unless some unexpectedly objectionable provisions are found in the amended proposal the commission will issue an order confirming the purchase early next week, it was said.

At the same time the commission plans to issue a concurrent order continuing in effect under the new ownership the present fares of the bus company—10 cents cash and $1.25 weekly pass—and prescribing transfers between the W. R. T. lines and the buses and cars of the Capital Transit, it was said.

Studies Agreement

Hinman D. Folsom, special assistant corporation counsel and counsel for the commission, is engaged in studying the agreement submitted by the company, and probably will report to the commission tomorrow. He already has drafted provisions designed to cover the various terms and conditions prescribed by the commission and to be incorporated in its formal order approving the deal.

The agreement covers purchase only of the interest of the North American company, national utilities holding concern, in the bus company. This includes a promissory note in the amount of $327,253.87, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent, and 21,237 shares of bus company stock held in the name of J. E. Baker, of New York, for which a price of $7 a share is to be paid. There are 375 shares of stock held by others.

Approval of the deal is contingent on consummation of the physical merger of the two properties, but Riley E. Elgen, commission chairman, said he did not intend to push for corporate merger as well.

Demand for Merger.

Demand that corporate merger be required was made in a memorandum filed with the commisison by William A. Roberts, people's counsel. The question was "much ado about nothing," Elgen said.

The $7 a share price fixed by the commission for the stock was $3 a share less than the Capital Transit had proposed to pay in its offer submitted to the commission for approval in February. At $7 the cost of the stock held in the name of Baker would be $148,659. This would be paid at the rate of $1 a share on consummation of the contract, one-half of the balance, $63,711, on consummation of the physical merger of the two companies, and the remainder within one year thereafter.

The interest rate on the North American note also would be reduced from 6 to 5 per cent. Of the value of the note, $27,255.87 would be paid on consummation of the physical merger and the balance in ten annual payments of $30,000 each thereafter.

3 Women Held In 'Numbers' Raid

Three Negro women were charged with operating a lottery yesterday when vice squad police raided an alleged "numbers" establishment in the 2400 block of Nichols avenue southeast.

Policeman Roy E. Blick said the women were taking bets in a small cigar store. The merchandise offered for sale would not amount to $5, he said.

"Numbers" slips representing $600 and a small quantity of change were confiscated.

Bus Overcrowing Scored by Citizens

Reported overcrowding of buses to Maryland was assailed last night at an organization meeting of Connecticut Avenue Citizens' Association.

After several members protested they "never can get a bus seat," Harry C. Grove, new president, announced the problem would be considered at the May meeting.

Allan Fisher was elected secretary and Miss Elizabeth Groves, treasurer. Standing committees will be appointed soon.

Edwin S. Hege, Chevy Chase association president, announced transfer of 290 members from his group to the Connecticut Avenue Association. He was praised for aiding in the organization work.

Cats in 15-Foot Ditch Rescued by Fire Squad

The fire rescue squad yesterday contributed its bit to "Be Kind to Animals' Week," rescuing two cats that had fallen into a 15-foot ditch in the rear of a home at 2009 Columbia road northwest, occupied by Dr. James G. McKay.

Dr. McKay called upon the fire department for aid when he could find no ladder long enough to make the rescue himself.

50 Co-Eds Help Tests to Find If Gentlemen Prefer Blondes

American U. Bevy Part of the Annual Scientific Experiment of School, But All to No Avail, So Far as Reporters Are Concerned.

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love—"

Which explains, no doubt, laboratory tests yesterday at American University to show how the blood pressure of male students reacts when they look at blondes and brunettes.

As the experiments were all in the interest of science a bevy of attractive coeds graciously tripped across the room while their charm was measured.

Reporters knew the university's biennial scientific exhibition was in progress, but failed to attend because they had no advance information of plans to test the theory that inspired a book—Anita Loos' "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

When newspapermen learned too late the wiles of blondes and brunettes had been weighed once and for all, they telephoned Miss Cornelia Cotton, chairman of the faculty committee in charge.

The conversation with the faintly amused biology instructor ran something like this:

"What did the tests show, Miss Cotton?"

"Not too much, I'm afraid."

"When did the blood pressure go up most, as they looked at blondes or brunettes?

"I don't know about that."

"Did the girls enter the room one at a time?

"No, they were all in there at once. How many? Oh, there were 50 or 60 people and half of them must have been girls."

"Were the tests a success?"

"I don't know."

"Did any fellow look at two different girls to see which one he loved the most?"

"I don't know. I didn't run it. Who did? Oh, a football player, Jack Rhodes."

"Did the girls giggle a lot?"

"I wasn't in the room all the time."

Mrs. Lyddane Will Face Jury Again May 18

Mrs. Anne Lyddane, former Rockville, Md., bank secretary, will go on trial in Hagerstown May 18 on a charge of conspiracy to murder her husband, Francis S. Lyddane, State's Attorney James H. Pugh announced in Rockville yesterday.

Pugh said he was notified that a definite date for the trial had been set by authorities at Hagerstown. The trial date has been postponed twice, having been scheduled originally for March, after Mrs. Lyddane was granted a change of venue by the Sixth Maryland Circuit Court at Rockville.

The first postponement was because of the special session of the State Legislature requiring attendance of chief counsel for Mrs. Lyddane, State Senator Stedman Prescott. The second delay came when the session of the court of appeals this month prevented Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, of Cumberland, a member of the appeals court, from sitting at the trial. Judge Sloan will be free to sit in the case May 18, with Associate Judge Frank G. Waggaman, of the Third Judicial Circuit.

The trial was taken to Hagerstown after Senator Prescott introduced 70 affidavits in which Montgomery County residents attested that in their opinion Mrs. Lyddane could not obtain an impartial trial in that county. State's Attorney Pugh, who will be assisted in the prosecution of the charge by State's Attorney Martin Ingram, of Washington County, opposed the change of venue, but suggested that the trial be moved to Baltimore. The court disregarded this suggestion and ordered it removed to Hagerstown.

The prosecution contends that Lydanne was marked for death by his wife and Washington underworld characters in her employ.

School Drill Contest Won By Roosevelt

Woodrow Wilson and Western Unit Second; Eastern Third.

Col. Craigie Presents Silver Trophy to Heatwole.

Marching over the field in Central High School Stadium in West Point-like alignment, the Roosevelt High School Cadet Regiment, commanded by Lieut. Col. Joseph Mahoney, won the annual regimental drill contest among Washington high schools yesterday afternoon.

Second place went to Western High School Regiment, one battalion of which was from Woodrow Wilson. The regiment was commanded by Lieut. Col. G. Cabell Busick. Third honors went to the regiment from Eastern High School. Lieut. John B. Fegan commanding, while Central High, last year's winner, failed to place.

It was a colorful affair as the blue-uniformed regiments went swinging past the stands to the rhythm of their regimental bands.

Parents Fill Stands.

The stands were filled with parents of the youthful soldiers and brightly clad high school girls moving restless feet in time with the martial music.

On the field, silver sabers flashed in the sun as platoon commanders crackled the command "Eyes right!" successively from rank to rank.

Regiments from Central, McKinley, Roosevelt, Eastern and Western-Woodrow Wilson high schools paraded in that order. Then, as the last cadets left the field, there was a hush while the judges, Capt. Lawrence L. Cobb and Lieut. Forrest Caraway, conferred to decide the winners.

A burst of cheering broke out in the stands when the Roosevelt cadets were named the winners and their officers came out to receive the awards.

Col. Wallace M. Craigie, in charge of military instruction in the District schools, presented a silver cup to the regimental adjutant, William Heatwole. The silver medal to the regimental commander, Lieut. Col. Mahoney, was presented by Lieut. Donald M. Brown, of the Naval Reserve Corps, military instructor at Roosevelt High. The silk flag, also symbolic of victory, was received by George Sandefer, guide sergeant of the regiment.

Wettersten Gets Cup.

Prizes were then awarded to winners of cadet military competitions held during the last few months.

The cup for the best-drilled battalion was presented to Lieut. Carl Wettersten, adjutant of the Woodrow Wilson High School Battalion. Maj. James Moser, commander, received a gold medal.

The cup awarded in the band competition went to the Eastern High School outfit, commanded by Capt. John A. Whitesel, who was also presented a gold medal.

Skeptics Fooled By Floor Show Score at Lotus

Revue Proves Popularity Even When Weather Is Against It.

By Chanticleer.

The name made by the Lotus many months ago for its revue type of floor shows which some were prone to believe would fast fade, holds on even into the first of the warm weather months. By revue type of show, I mean a one that runs almost a ful lhour with dancing choruses and specialty performers.

This week, for example, Emmcee Al Norton presents the Tolmacks, a novelty act packed with surprises, direct from the West Coast; Manno and Stafford, ballroom team; Dorothy Hoghton, direct from dancing at the Hollywood Country Club, Miami, and to top everything off—Judy Ellington, vocalizing with Bill Strickland and his Capitolians.

Just added this week to the Club Habana's band platform—Ginger Lee, who sings the choruses while Guy Scott waggles the baton.

Perhaps Maryland Club Garden's Chef Russell has something to do with it, too, but I have a hunch it's spring that makes folks want to eat in the country. Frying chicken isn't a job with Russell. It's a rite.

One of Kitty Simons' costumes includes the symbol of her place of employment—a high hat. Kitty believes in changes at the Hi-Hat, just as much so as a stage performer. This week's talented guest at the Ambassador, who did some impromptu singing and guitar strumming at the behest of Manager Conn, was Tommy Suiters.

Karavaeff has gone back a few centuries for an old Russian dance in another of the talented dancer's explosions of the myth that all Russian dances are fast and furious. The truth is, says Karavaeff, Russian dancing originally was slow in tempo and very graceful. Karavaeff, of course, is Helen Hamilton's Russian Troika's dancing man.

Ralph Garren, maestro at the Dude Ranch, is a grandfather as of this week. You'd never know it to see him leading the band. Hill's Dog Revue has been added to the floor show, but Billy Mason's 1936 Dansant Revue is the bell-ringer.

Warner Kennedy, pianist in the band at Brinkley's, has composed a ditty—and what is more, it's being published. Title: "I'll Be Grateful to You." Speaking of new arrivals, the maestro of Brinkley's Aces also has been blessed, a girl this time.

Host Peter Borras has decided to soft-pedal the floor attractions at the Madrillon and emphasize those three daily items so dear to everyone in the spring—luncheon, dinner and supper! Priscilla Bennett and Giano are still presented, of course. With Leon Brusiloff and his work for the dancers.

Hughie O'Donnell pulled another talent out of the bag this week at La Paree and showed he can duplicate the skill of the skater and that of the hoofer. He does a nice tap on roller skates. The revue at La Paree this week runs to tall maidens, and of a type quite easy to look upon.

On View at the Supper Clubs This Week

On the Air Today

Now that the crisis has been passed in the rescue of the trapped men up in Nova Scotia, an observation can be made in quite good taste respecting the reporting by radio from Moose River. It was in the hands of the Canadian Radio Commission, as you will recall if you heard the half-hourly air reports direct from the mine.

Much criticism has been leveled at the American system of broadcasting. Our commercializing the airways and lack of educational and intellectual programs has been disdained. England's governmentally controlled broadcasting plan has received huge bouquets from Americans who have visited that country or otherwise (perhaps by short-wave) had contact with British Broadcasting Corporation programs.

But, my hearties, if the reporting of the developments at Moose River is a sample of broadcasting under such paternal auspices—I will have to trade in my radio set for a good phonograph—and forget radio forever if and when we get it.

Those five-minute reports from Moose River must have taxed the ingenuity of the men assigned to give them. They were miniature masterpieces in the art of putting adjectives together. They drew pictures of tenseness and heroic endeavor. They were dramatic and at times a little theatrical.

But—they gave practically no details of the (insert here the same adjectives as used in the descriptions) event taking place. It reminded somewhat of the occasion when deadly criticism was directed at McNamee for his lengthy description of a California sunset when the listeners thought, at least, that he ought to be talking about the football game being played at the time.

If these mine broadcasts are a sample of "regulated" and censored broadcasts, I am grateful for the American system. A good American newspaperman, trained in reporting gripping and heroic events, given such an assignment, would have held a radio audience riveted in its collective chair.

I still believe a newspaper reporter is the best reporter. Whether he's on the air or writing a piece for the morning paper. But even the best of them can be beaten if rigid censorship is exercised.

Culbertson on Bridge

Superb Defense Opportunity.

I probably would be a great deal more popular if I never "kibitzed" a game of contract. Not that I am a noisy or obtrusive kibitzer. From bitter experience I always try to remain discreetly in the background. But invariably some dispute will arise and before I can sneak out of the room I am called on for an opinion. Since the player to whom I award the decision always takes it quite smugly as his just desserts, and the other disputant makes it obvious that he considers me either biased or idiotic, I seem to come out the only loser in every argument.

The immediate cause for this bitter reflection is the hand shown below, played recently at Crockford's Club, New York:

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

♦ K Q J 10 9 7
♣ A 3 2

WEST
♠ Q 10 9 3
♥ K J 8 3
♦ 6 5 2

EAST
♥ A 7 5 2
♦ 8 4 3
♣ Q 10 9 7

SOUTH
♠ A K J 8 6
♦ A
♣ 8 6 5 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 diam	Pass
2 spades	Pass	3 diam	Pass
3 no trp [final bid]

South's three no trump bid was optimistic but not too terrible, considering his nonvulnerability.

West opened the three of hearts and East won with the ace. East was torn between two desires: to try to remove dummy's club entry and to lead back partner's suit in case a lead through an honor in declarer's hand were necessray. His choice of the latter plan cannot be criticized.

West captured declarer's heart ten with the jack, laid down the king, and gayly cashed his fourth heart. Declarer, with a terrific sigh of relief, got rid of his blocking ace of diamonds and properly claimed the rest of the tricks.

Then the fight began! When East pointed out the obvious—that if West had failed to cash his fourth heart and had shifted to clubs the diamond suit would have been irremediably blocked—West retorted angrily that he wasn't clairvoyant, that no player in the world would have failed to cash the good heart. Then I was dragged into the argument.

I said [apologetically] that I thought West was wrong; that there were players—although only a few—who could have visualized and acted on the one possible hope that declarer had the blank ace of diamonds. I pointed out that South's bidding clearly indicated the ace and king of spades; that if he held the diamond ace with a small diamond for entry to the dummy there was no chance to stop nine tricks. Also I pointed out that if East held the diamond ace no serious loss could accrue from a club shift, since East was marked with another heart for the fifth defensive trick. I concluded with the remark that it would have been beautiful defense.

East merely nodded smugly, while West muttered something under his breath that sounded like "double-dummy."

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.

Several points hitherto overlooked in discussion of the five-day week proposals are found in the following letter:

"1. Schools, colleges and universities are on a five-day week.

BAKER.

"2. It has proved effective in many industrial and commercial enterprises without cutting salaries.

"3. Several thousand Federal employes already are on a five-day schedule.

"A bill placing all Government personnel, with certain specific exceptions, on a five-day week has been introduced by Representative McCormack. Representative Ramspeck has declared himself in favor of it if the hours worked per week were increased to 40, making an eight-hour day. I think this defeats the proposal, as most Government employes would not care to sacrifice an hour each day.

"I believe a 35-hour week should go into effect as soon as possible. This would probably make it necessary to add several thousands to the civilian personnel. Unemployment is still at a high-water mark, with industry apparently unable to absorb the lag fast enough to make a real dent in the relief rolls.

"Therefore, a five-day Federal week should accomplish two things: (a) create more jobs in the Government service, and (b) set an example to business for a universal five-day week.—Guy d'Aulby (P)."

Colored Employes Fete.

Do They Not Know?

Do not our servants on the hill
Know rents are much too high?
Do they not know there's little left
For all that one must buy?
Do they not know the "kennels"
Where Government workers dwell?
If they don't know, why are they here
Will someone kindly tell?
Do landlords charge a Congressman,
What other folks must pay?
And do they also give a cut
Of twenty per cent, some folks say?
C. S. (F), Labor.

Virginia Industry Reports Job Gains

Richmond, Va., April 23 (AP).—The average umber of employes of five Virginia manufacturing groups increased 5.5 per cent during the first quarter of 1936 over the same period last year, Frank P. Evans, statistician of the State industrial commission, said today.

Total hours worked in the same group of factories increased 8.8 per cent as compared with the first quarter of 1935, which he said indicated lengthening of hours of employment.

The groups studied had an average employment of 58,489 during the first quarter of this year.

Maryland Faces Crab Shortage Because of Cold

Baltimore, April 23 (AP).—Chairman Robert Duer, of the Maryland Conservation Commission, said today reports indicated there would be a definite shortage of crabs this summer.

Duer said reports from Virginia indicated mortality among crabs was high due to cold weather of last winter. He said it was impossible to get definite reports on mortality in Maryland waters of the Chesapeake Bay.

The crab situation is a chief topic for discussion at a meeting to be held May 11, 12 and 13 in Old Point, Va. Maryland and Virginia officials will attend and it is possible, Duer said, that R. Bruce Etheridge, North Carolina conservation head, also would be present.

$100,000 Bond Set for Torrio, RumRing Head

U.S. Will Seek to Send Him to Alcatraz With His Comrade, Capone.

By the United Press.

New York, April 23.—Federal authorities, striking at a $1,000,000 liquor syndicate, held Johnny Torrio in $100,000 bail tonight and said they were going to try to send him to Alcatraz Prison for a reunion with the comrade of his Chicago days—Al Capone.

Treasury Department agents predicted they would make a dozen more arrests soon and smash the gang that has been smuggling liquor from the island of St. Pierre for illegal distribution in the United States.

New York police were envious of the capture made by the Federal agents. They have had a long-standing date with Torrio, but the only thing they could do today was take him to headquarters and formally express to him their regret that he still was alive.

Police reluctantly turned Torrio back to the Treasury agents who took him before United States Commissioner Isaac Platt. Assistant United States Attorney Nicholas T. Rogers told the commissioner Treasury agents had grabbed the gangster in the White Plains, N. Y., postoffice yesterday just as he was about to pick up a passport and leave the country. Bail was set at $100,000 and police announced they would stand by to arrest Torrio if and when he raised it.

The charge against Torrio is "conspiracy to evade payment of liquor taxes." Agents said the syndicate had defrauded the Federal Government of $1,000,000 in taxes by smuggling liquor from the French island of St. Pierre—off the Canadian coast.

Much of this liquor, according to agents, was distributed by reputable dealers who were unaware they were handling contraband. Torrio is alleged to have resorted to all the devices he used during prohibition, including ownership of a fleet of ships and trucks. Among the dozen arrests pending, according to gaents, are "some well-known businessmen."

Counsel Charges Shikat Was Told to 'Lay Down' to O'Mahoney

Dodger Fans Wild; Giants Bow, 4-3

New York Rally Evens Score in 9th; Ott's Homer Is Futile.

Brooklyn Fights Back to Win in 10th as 17,018 Cheer.

By Jack Miley.
A Special Correspondent.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 23.—The Giants and Dodgers played themselves ten innings of rip-roaring, cock-eyed baseball before 17,018 fans at Ebbetts Field today. Going into the ninth two runs to the bad, the New Yorkers tied the score. Mel Ott's homer in the tenth put them a marker ahead and seemingly gave them a victory the hard way, but those Brooks just weren't to be denied. They came back with two tallies on Jimmy Bucher's single, which scored Linus Frey with the tying run, and another safety by Syd Gautreaux, a sub catcher, which delivered Freddy Lindstrom with the pay-off perambulation.

For eight innings the Giants couldn't get any place because Watson (Lefty) Clark was sizzling and held 'em to four measly wallops. Hal Schumacher meanwhile yielded twice as many before he was pulled for a pinch hitter in the eighth.

Then came a parade of Giant moundsmen, including Dick Coffman, Harry Gumbert and Al Smith. None of these young men had what it took and the Dodgers climbed aboard 'em.

Dick Bartell Day, it is regrettable to report, was a dismal failure. This was entirely due to Raucous Richard's decision to remain out of sight. He hovered in the dugout with a dozen cops about him to protect him from violence while other gendarmes took up their stations at the gates and searched the fans for elderly vegetables and such like as they arrived. One fellow had a squashy cantaloupe taken from him by the law. He said that he was in quest of some ice cream so he could enjoy some cantaloupé a la mode, but the bluecoat made him surrender his breakfastable basket ball. Dick Bartell Day has not been abandoned, the bleacherites said. They have merely deferred it until such time as little High Spikes from the Poo Grounds makes his first appearance in the Dodgers' home port.

Gehrig Is All Up in the Air

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Lou Gehrig, Yankee first baseman, went high, wide and handsome for Rolph's throw on Miles' grounder yesterday in the Washington-New York game, but the Nat was safe at first. Miles beat out the throw after batting for Weaver in the third inning.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

New York, April 23.

A Springfield, Mass., boy who has done very well for himself in the big city, Jack Doyle, by name, today shocked this department no end with the statement that he is accepting no more bets on the Washington ball club to win the pennant.

Mr. Doyle, you may or may not know, is the proprietor of Doyle's billiard parlors fronting on Forty-first street and Broadway, and a very wise man, indeed. He is, moreover, Broadway's No. 1 betting commissioner and author of Doyle's odds on the pennant races. When Mr. Doyle quotes the odds, he is getting none the worst of it as his elaborate establishment, his comfortable home in the city, his long-nosed Packard and his uniformed chauffeur would seem to imply.

POVICH.

But this gentleman, who in appearance is the perfect antithesis of the common conception of a bookmaker, sans hat, sans the impudent cigar tucked in the corner of his mouth, sans corpulence and sans the proverbial elk's tooth watch charm, admits himself in error on his pre-season estimate of the Washington club.

During the winter, Mr. Doyle, whose prominence in his profession is such that he finds no difficulty in breaking into print, was offering 30, 15 and 4 against the chances of the Washington club to finish, respectively, one, two, three in the 1936 pennant race and snapping up all money offered at that price.

But with the start of the season nearing and the success of the Nats in spring training games making itself apparent, Mr. Doyle saw fit to reduce the odds he was laying to the figures of 20, 6 and 3. And now, with the season in its second week, Mr. Doyle has suspended all operations as far as the Washington club is concerned.

Mr. Doyle, in explaining to this department that he was not at present taking any more bets against Washington, said to this department, "I am not taking any more bets against Washington." He went on to say, however, that is only a temporary moratorium.

"This is only temporary as far as the Washington club is concerned," said Mr. Doyle, "but folks around here and all through the East snapped up those 20-to-1 odds so quickly and loaded me with so much money that it is not good business to lay any more against Washington.

"I will begin taking bets on Washington on the first of May, when I publish my new list of odds. But in the meantime, I am only watching the progress of the pennant race. I am in a fair way toward taking an awful rap if Washington should win the pennant, and I've got to hedge. The next odds I publish on the Washington club will be a great deal lower.

"I consider Washington the dark horse in this league. They need only pitching to win the pennant and with fellows like DeShong and Appleton coming through for 'em they've got me scared. This Newsom gives the Washington team an awful edge any time he's in the box, and I'm convinced that I overlaid the Washington team when I quoted 'em at 20 to 1. I've got to get out from under.

"They tell me that this boy, Buddy Lewis, is a big improvement at third base for Washington and I guess it must be true. When you strengthen a club in only one position it means a lot. Look at what Hank Lieber did for the Giants last year. He almost won the pennant for 'em, and if Lewis is the kind of a player my friends say he is, it'll mean a lot to Washington. I'll probably mark 'em down to 10 to 1 in my next odds."

Doyle has revised his odds on the other clubs in the league to make the Tigers and the Red Sox the co-favorites at 7 to 5. At the start of the season he had quoted the Tigers at 7 to 5 with Boston the second choice at 8 to 5, but he is now attempting to balance his book.

Doyle was saying that, personally, he thought the Red Sox would win the pennant. He expects the Tigers to crack this season, and he thinks the Yankees will be lucky to finish in the first division.

Georgetown Prep opened its golf season yesterday with a 6-0 victory over St. John's at the Garrett Park course.

12-Hit Attack Wasted; Yanks Beat Nats, 10-6

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, April 23.—With a sustained exhibition of inexpert pitching, inefficient base-running and untimely hitting, the Nats this afternoon succeeded in losing another ball game.

The Nats outnumbered the Yankees in base hits, 12 to 9; in pitchers, 5 to 2, and held 'em to a tie in the making of errors, but in the important item of run-scoring they lagged slightly—or, to be exact, 10 to 6.

Washington wasted its dozen hits with great extravagance and negligible results. At one point the Nats had made nine hits, compared to two for the Yankees, but at the same point the Yanks were boasting a 4-3 lead.

Great authority was concentrated in two of those Yankee hits, with two on base in the second inning, Dixie Walker whacked one of Monte Weaver's pitches for a home run into the rightfield bleachers, and, under similar conditions in the sixth, George Selkirk slammed one of Jack Russell's offerings into the did the Yanks account for enough leftfield stands. Thus, with two hits runs at least to tie the game.

Bucky Harris suddenly changed his pitching plans before the game and reserved Earl Whitehill from the contest, naming, instead, Monte Weaver. Almost from the outset Harris was busily engaged in changing his pitching plans. He called Kendall Chase into action in the third, switched to Joe Bokina in the fifth, to Jack Russell in the sixth and finally to Henry Coppola in the eighth. Coppola had the best record when he held the Yanks to one hit in one inning.

Not until Manager McCarthy got Red Ruffing out of there in the sixth inning were the various Yankee leads safe. With the Nats having battered Ruffing around in the first six innings and reduced the New York margin to 7-6, McCarthy called in the left-handed Ted Kleinhans, who held Washington to one hit in the last three and two-thirds innings.

Washington rallies sagged in the middle in both the first and second innings when the Nats' base-running went sour. After Hill and Lewis opened the game with singles, Lewis ran into Lazzeri's arms to enable the Yankee to tag him out on the base lines and start a double play on Powell's grounder, and in the second, with the stage set for some-run making, Walter Millies absurdly tried to stretch a single to rightfield into a double and was easily cut down by Selkirk's throw.

In the third, Weaver started handing out the first of the nine walks issued by Washington pitchers, and after he had put two on on base Walker walloped a line-drive homer into the rightfield stands. It was 4-0 in favor of the Yanks after Crosetti also walked and Rolfe doubled.

The Nats put themselves back in the ball game in the third inning after Pinch-hitter Miles was safe on Rolfe's wild throw and scored three runs on a Texas league double by Powell and a solid two-bagger to left by Travis.

Young Kendall Chase, pitching his first big-league game, held the Yanks safe in the third and fourth, but they caught up with him in the fifth and increased their margin to 7-3 after he had walked Rolfe and Gehrig and pitched singles to Johnson and Dickey. Bokina finally got 'em out.

Again in the sixth the Nats cut the Yanks' lead to one run after Kuehel started the inning by blasting a homer into rightfield. Millies drew a walk, but Ruffing disposed of Pinch-hitter Estalella by striking him out after first cutting loose a suspicious-looking bean ball that sent the Cuban sprawling.

Lewis greeted the southpaw with a single that scored Millies. Hill scored the third run of the inning as Myer hit into a force play, and the Nats never did get another man on base.

The Yanks answered that uprising with a three-run splurge of their own against Russell in the sixth. It began when Myer booted Kleinhans' roller into rightfield for a two-base error and ended when Selkirk slammed his homer to left after Johnson had walked.

Indians Down Chisox, 6-0; Gain Lead

Allen Scatters 7 Hits as Mates Slam Whitehead Out in 1st Frame.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, April 23.—The Indians returned to first place in the American League standings today by blasting in six runs behind Johnny Allen's speedy hurling to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 0.

Allen, in his debut on the home grounds as a member of the Tribe, held the invaders to seven hits, scattered except for two in the seventh inning. Allen's performance was marred only slightly by a tendency to throw wild.

The Indians garnered a four-run lead in the initial inning on as many hits, driving Johnny Whitehead from the box.

Hughes led off with a double in the fifth. He romped in when Averill followed suit. Trosky rifled a two-bagger down the rightfield line to score Averill.

Budge Ragged As He Defeats Gene Mako

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 23.—Don Budge, red-haired singles star from Oakland, Calif., playing a ragged game, defeated Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, in the semifinals of the Mason-Dixon tennis tournament today. The score: 3—6, 6—4, 6—4 and 6—4.

Budge's backhand, usually excellent, was badly off, and he had little power in his shots.

The victory pits Budge against the winner of a semifinal contest tomorrow between Hal Surface, of Kansas City, and Byron (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta. The finals will be played Sunday.

In the doubles, Wilmer Allison, captain of the Davis Cup team, and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, doubles star, moved up to the semi-finals defeated Thomas J. Mangan, jr. and Robert McElvenney, 6—4, 6—2.

Petersen Retains British Ring Title

By the Associated Press.

London, April 23.—Jack Petersen retained his British and Empire heavyweight championship tonight by outpointing Jock McAvoy in a 15-round bout. McAvoy, weighing 178, spotted Petersen 12 pounds.

There was only one knockdown. Toward the end Petersen clipped McAvoy, wearer of the British middleweight and light heavyweight crowns, with a right uppercut and floored him for a count of eight. Petersen was warned several times by the referee when his blows landed on the back of McAvoy's head.

McAvoy, making good use of a few tricks he learned while fighting in the United States, weaved continually and fought from a crouch that had Petersen puzzled.

Bow and Arrow Captures Feature Race at Havre de Grace

Victory Is 1st For Bradley Stables

Staraway, Red Wagon Score in First and Third Events.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace Race Track, April 23.—The green and white of Col. E. R. Bradley entered the winner's circle for the first time this year in Maryland today. Bow and Arrow, a gelded son of Whichone, was expertly handled by Joe Renick in a dash of 6 furlongs called The Century, probably in memory of the many $100 bills that have been lost here by the favorite players.

Jockey Renick had on his "trying boots" in the race and rode as if his very life depended on the outcome of the event. He brought his charge home a length and a half in front of a head-and-head battle between Galmica and Aneroid for second money. The race was run in 1:12 4-5, fair time for the type of horses.

This track continues to hold its popularity. Some 10,000 were out to take a fling at the "ponies" and for a change the favorites were doing a lot of clicking. Two of the public choices figured in a daily-double pay-off of $18.60. Staraway won the first race and Red Wagon took the third.

Favorite Players Score.

The feature saw My Colin and Night Play battle for the early lead, with Renick holding Bow and Arrow under slight restraint in the dash along the backstretch. At the far turn, Renick suddenly decided to shoot and he picked out a narrow opening between the leaders for the move. Through it Bow and Arrow bounced. Once he emerged in the clear, Renick went to work with a will and it is lucky he did, for Galmica and Aneroid were fast-closing horses. However, Bow and Arrow had distance to spare at the all-important wire.

The favorite players were off to a flying start when the Foxcatcher Farm's Staraway did the expected in the first race to pay a $6.60 mutuel. Rushed to the front by Jockey Mose Peters within the opening furlong, Staraway was not threatened thereafter. True Tune, running greenly was second and Peggy Shippen was third in a field of ten juveniles.

The firm of Abel and Abel, the wife the owner and the husband the trainer, took a purse in the second race when Chiliad stepped home at a $12.00 mutuel. The son of Chilhowee moved up on the outside in the stretch to fight a winning but close battle with Sunned. Distracting was third. The field included a dozen cheap claiming horses and they competed at the six furlongs route.

Gay Edward, a field horse, won the fifth race, giving Jockey Joe Renick his second winner of the day. The Ed Crump gelding ran Movie Lass into submission and continued gamely to hold Fairest Flag safe. Movie Lass managed to stagger into third money. The field paid a $12.40 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STARAWAY, $6.60, $4.60, $3.40; TRUE TUNE, $10.70, $6.20; PEGGY SHIPPEN, $3.20.

STARAWAY, away in the first flight, assumed a slight lead midway of the turn, saved ground until reaching the homestretch, swerved out after being straightened into the homestretch, but held on strongly to withstand TRUE TUNE. Latter went close up from the beginning, lost ground when making a wide turn into the homestretch, and weakened after making a strong bid in the closing furlong. PEGGY SHIPPEN was hustled hard to hold a forward position, and showed a good effort. HARRY'S DREAM closed with good energy. SWIFTPLY was in trouble going to the turn, and had to be eased back. She failed to rally when coming through on the inside entering the homestretch when the leaders went wide. WARRIOR QUEEN could not menace. ACCRUE was never a factor. HAPPY HOSTESS lacked speed. ALAHAD showed a dull performance.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:04. Winner, Mrs. A. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHILIAD, $12.00, $6.00, $4.20; SUNNED, $5.00, $3.50; DISTRACTING, $3.00.

CHILIAD, hustled hard to obtain a contending position, worked his way up steadily when forced to a hard drive in the last five-sixteenths, swung to the outside in the stretch run and was up in the last few strides. SUNNED, a strong factor all the way, wore TITIAN KIDDIE down but could not withstand the winner. DISTRACTING, forwardly placed early, finished with good courage in the last furlong. SILENT DON was going gamely nearing the end after suffering interference on the backstretch. DONA DULCIN had a rough trip. She closed resolutely when finding racing room on the inside in the last stages. GOODY GOODY went evenly. CLOSE CALL could not reach a forward position. DOESKIN went strong for five furlongs, then tired. LITTLE ARGO broke very slow.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:44. Winner, S. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED WAGON, $5.50, $4.30, $3.10; EPITAPH, $8.40, $4.20; HEADIN' HOME, $4.20.

RED WAGON moved into the lead soon after the start, responded readily when shaken up entering the homestretch and outstayed EPITAPH under a hard drive. EPITAPH, hustled along all the way, made repeated efforts in the last five-sixteenths and held on courageously until the close. HEADIN' HOME improved his position gradually and closed determinedly on the inside after reaching the homestretch. PREVENTION saved ground all the way, but faltered after making a stout bid midway of the stretch drive. WISE SISTER had good speed and raced nicely all the way. CRUISING was gaining slowly at the end. BEVEAU closed a good gap from a slow beginning. MASTER LAD was never a forward factor. SEMAPHORE stopped after a half mile. APPREHEND lacked speed at all stages.

DAILY DOUBLE, $18.60.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Century. For 3-year-olds. Allowances. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:24. Winner, E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOW AND ARROW, $6.50, $5.00, $3.80; GALMICA, $6.20, $4.00; ANEROID, $6.00.

BOW AND ARROW, well up from the start, disposed of MY COLIN to take command when leaving the backstretch, drew out into a safe lead in the stretch, but was kept under mild pressure to the finish. GALMICA, slow to find his speed, gradually improved his position when in full stride and closed with good speed. ANEROID, always a forward factor, held on gamely. NIGHT PLAY had good speed to race with the early leaders, but tired from his efforts. TWO BOB raced far back in the early stages, but made up some ground at the end. WAR EMBLEM could not keep up. MY COLLIN stopped badly after a half mile.

FIFTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:53. Off at 5:02½. Winner, K. E. Hitt's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY EDWARD (field), $12.40, $5.30, $3.90; FAIREST FLAG, $6.40, $4.30; MOVIE LASS, $5.20.

GAY EDWARD moved into a short lead when leaving the backstretch, raced MOVIE LASS into submission in the first seven furlongs, rallied to a hard drive when straightened into the homestretch and outstayed FAIREST FLAG. Latter worked her way into contention on the outside, reached contention entering the homestretch and closed with good courage. MOVIE LASS remained close to the winner after being overtaken and held on well for the closing test. FEZ was under stout urging for the entire trip. JACK PATCHES went well placed, saved ground, but failed to menace when put to a strong drive. CORUM lacked early speed and could not threaten the leaders in the stretch stages. DEVILMENT and SEEDLING broke from outside the stall gates and were never dangerous. ME MYSELF showed speed in the first six furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:36. Winner, Ascot Stale's dk. br. g. (4), by Light Brigade—Coco. Trained by H. Young. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:45 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIGHT BROOK, $8.00, $4.80, $4.10; LONE HAND, $9.50, $5.60; DANCING CLOUD, $6.10.

LIGHT BROOK, blocked repeatedly on the backstretch when attempting to move through on the inside, came strongly when reaching the homestretch and drew out stoutly after getting to the front in the last furlong. LONE HAND improved his position on the outside and came with good courage in the final test. DANCING CLOUD, slow to get going, bettered his position steadily in the last half mile and was racing stoutly at the close. TULEYRIES WAND, placed forwardly, made a strong effort midway of the final turn, but weakened during the stretch drive. GUILDER shook off SCOTTY DON without effort, but weakened badly in the last quarter mile. VIVA PETE was never a factor. SCOTTY DON stopped badly. DALMATIA was done after going six furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:06. Off at 6:08½. Winner, A. C. Compton's dk. g. (7), by Mad Hatter—Frumpery. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAD TRUMP, $8.80, $5.00, $3.70; APATHY, $8.10, $5.10; WISHING STAR, $7.30.

MAD TRUMP, close to the early pacemakers throughout, responded well to move to the leaders entering the stretch and hung on gamely. APATHY had early speed to set the pace, saved ground throughout and just failed to last. WISHING STAR forced the early pace, but tired in the final furlong. OVERSTIMULATE raced well placed and evenly throughout, but went slightly wide entering the stretch. MOUNT HOOD, also as usual in the early racing, closed a good gap. SIX BELLS tired. The others were outrun.

Chinese Boxer, Overlin Meet At Arena

Chong on Monday's Card, Is First of Nationality to Fight Here.

Since the legalization of boxing, Washington has had its first knockout, its first foul, its first 15-round fight and any number of other firsts, but a new one will be unveiled at Joe Turner's Arena next Monday night when the Capital gets its first glimpse of a Chinese fighter.

Not only is Ralph Chong, the middle weight who is scheduled for 10 rounds against Ken Overlin, the first Chinese to show here, he is one of the few fighters of his nationality ever to take up the prize ring as a profession.

Perhaps Chong is the biggest Chinese fighter ever in the ring, also. Out on the West Coast there have been a few bantam and featherweights who were Chinese, but never so far as anyone can recall, has there been a successful big Oriental battler until Chong came along.

Chong is not a West Coast Chinese. He was born in New Orleans. He started to fight almost as soon as he could walk because he had to. He had to fight to keep the kids in his tough neighborhood from making life miserable for him by calling him "Chinkee, Chinkee." He developed such fistic proficiency in these impromptu neighborhood brawls that he graviated to the squared circle as a matter of course.

In an eight-round semifinal, Ritchie Mack, Indianapolis welterweight, will box Cary Wright, a local lad who made a remarkable stand against Phil Furr a few weeks ago. Mack has taken one decision from Kid Azteca and held the Mexican star to a draw in another bout.

Havre de Grace, April 23.—Despite the small percentage of winning favorites here, the track is showing a decided increase in "handle" over last year . . . and to the surprise of everybody, announced today that starting Saturday, the minimum purse for the balance of the meeting will be $1,000 instead of $800 . . . Edward Burke, the general manager here, is to be congratulated on the move . . . the horsemen greeted the news with enthusiasm . . . if Pimlico follows suit, Maryland may retain a number of the second flight platers, necessary to every racing program, that otherwise will be lured to New York and New England . . . when the depression hit the State's tracks, Burke was out-voted in his effort to keep up the scale of purses . . . possibly this is the first move to send Maryland racing back to a high plane . . . if Burke would install a "tote," the Graw might walk away with the turf spotlight . . . the "black eye," or photographic finish, hasn't been used for a couple of days . . . which is probably just as well . . . Eddie Smith, the Washington jockey who was tossed by Tell It yesterday, will be back in action tomorrow . . . there is a report that E. F. Seagram wants to sign him . . . Sonny Workman's daughter is ill . . . the steeplechase enthusiasts are getting ready for a big session at Pimlico . . . I never saw horsemen so worked up as they are over the Aberdeen Stakes . . . opinion is divided as to the probable winner . . . Goldey F. and Airflame are the chief rivals due to clash . . . the former has won six straight and the latter set a world's three-eighth record of .33 on the West Coast . . . there will be wads of cash for this pair . . . but other trainers are not being scared out of the race . . . they are quietly grooming their charges . . . if an upset comes, the pay-off should be in stock market numbers . . . Argyle Only District Club Without Pro; Lou Harrison Proves Standout Golfer

(This is the tenth of a series of articles dealing with prospects for 1936 at Washington and nearby golf courses.)

By Dave Herman.

Argyle Country Club, situated just across the way from Indian Spring Club, was once the golfing rendezvous for many of Washington topnotch players.

There it was that Roger Sylvester Peacock first learned to play golf. Born a good spoon and iron shot from the seventh fairway, District Champion Peacock called for several years at the attractive nine-hole course before he was graduated to the ranks of active golfers.

Before trading Argyle for Indian Spring, where he attained stardom, Peacock left an indelible impression in the form of a blistering 66, six under par, which today is still the unofficial course record.

Argyle is the only country club in this section that does not have a professional. There was talk once of hiring one, but the 175 members didn't think it was necessary, due to the small play during the week days.

Argyle's king of swing is Lou Harrison, club champion for the last two years, whose lowest score is a 66.

When Bill DiEste, the famous

cross-handed expert died in 1935, Harrison stepped in as the kingpin. DiEste had a long reign as club ruler, having won something like six championships. They certainly miss old Bill at Argyle.

That old gang is gone. Tom Pitt, brother of Harry, the Manor Moose; Jack Lynch, Mel Shipley, Earl McAleer, southpaw ace; Joe Cox, Harvey Shipley, Frank Butler, Jack Biggs, Mike Oliveri and Bobby Bowen are no longer connected with the club.

Dr. Jack Dudley, who handles his woods and irons with the same skill and ease he does teeth, is the veteran member of the club. A good golfer, too. So is his brother, Don. Look back on the records of invitation tournaments. You'll find the Dudleys always win a prize in some flight.

Cotton-haired Merrell Whittlesey, Tony Willmet, Jock Olmsted, Maurice Cooper, Worth Arnold, Sam Harvey, Capt. Bohlander and John Boyd are the low-handicap players.

Percy LeDuc, greens chairman, is responsible for the good looking course, and Bill Taylor, golf chairman, for the nicely handled tournaments.

Mrs. Elizabeth Smith and Mrs. Jack Dudley are the best of the women golfers. Mrs. Smith recently wagered she would shoot an 80 before the season ended.

At the Post . . .

Tech, Central Nines Open Series Today at Griffith Stadium

Ball Park Site First Time in 20 Years

Wide Open Battle Seen for Campaign; Tilt Starts at 3:30.

Mt. Pleasant Team Given Edge in Pitching Strength.

By John R. Vosburgh.

On the well-manicured playing field of Griffith Stadium, where schoolboys long have feared to tread, Tech and Central will open another interhigh series this afternoon. When the teams take the field at 3:30, it will mark the first time since 1916 that interhigh spikes have torn the finely wrought surface generally reserved for the more hallowed feet of big leaguers.

Among the expected spectators is Mr. Clark Griffith, himself. His presence is deemed appropriate in view of the schools' making free use of his ball park in the opening game of the annual scramble for the huge and handsome trophy annually contributed to the interhigh champion by Mr. Griffith.

The honor of throwing out the opening ball has not definitely been bestowed as yet. Because of the inability of Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou to be on hand at game time, the first pitch hangs between "Old Fox" Griffith and "Speedball" Birch Bayh, head of the school physical education system.

The game should mark a sizzling start for one of the most wide open series ever predicted. It will find Tech, an unbeaten team, only an even choice to win over a Central team beaten six times in eight starts this season.

Central will have a decided edge from a pitching standpoint so far as experience is concerned. Bob (Lefty) Rowles, a tosser of three years experience, will be throwing 'em up for the Mount Pleasanters, and Louis West, a young sophomore right-hander, will pitch for Tech. Although this is his first year out, West showed plenty of talent in both games Tech has played.

The only school played by both Tech and Central, Marblehead (Mass.) High, lost a 7-2 decision to Tech, and a 24-16 slugfest to Central. Tech's other victory was a 9-6 win over Washington-Lee High of Ballston, Va.

Judge Opens Industrial League

With a healthy heave of his good left arm, Joe Judge, the former custodian of first base for the Nats, will throw out the ball opening the powerful Industrial League's season today at 4 p. m. on the East Ellipse. The toss will signalize the outbreak of hostilities between the Heurich Brewers and Miller Furniture, 1935 champions and runner-up, respectively.

Thus one of the strongest circuits among the 18 leagues in The Washington Post Sandlot Baseball Association will get under way with a top-notch performance more or less off the bat.

The Brewers, finalists in the week-day play-offs for The Post Association championship last year, have most of last year's strong club back in uniform. They won the second-half championship last year and a play-off for the league title from Miller Furniture which won the first-half championship.

Manager Fee Colliere of the Brewers in counting on Shout Taylor to do the pitching for the Beermen. Colliere will do the receiving.

For the Furniture Club, Manager Bill Ethridge has either the veteran Frank DiNenna or Carl Wahler, ready for mound duty, with Russ Kidwell completing the battery. A mound duel looms. The reliable Bottle Cox will do the umpiring.

The Furniture team is made up chiefly of veterans who have been playing together for 7 or 8 years. The only new members are Eddie Cinotti, at second, and DiNenna, to the mound staff. The Millermen won the Capital City League championship in 1934.

Mt. Rainier Beats Wilson High, 7-3

The big bat of Tillie Scott, Mount Rainier's ace athlete, and the excellent hurling of Steve Ager, who did not allow the enemy a run in the last six innings of yesterday's game, proved to be the deciding factors in Mount Rainier's victory over Woodrow Wilson High, 7 to 3, on the Mounts' field.

The lads from the District line scored in the first inning when Larry Finn doubled and came in on Scott's triple to deep left center. Again in the third frame the Mounts scored three runs, Finn singled and went to second on S. Miller's bingle through the box. Taylor singled filling the bases. At this point Scott repeated his first appearance at the plate driving the ball far over the leftfielder's head to clear the bags and gave the home team a 4-to-0 lead.

Woodrow Wilson scored three times in the third, the only inning they were able to put a runner across the plate.

Fighting Not Approved; 2 Wrestlers Suspended

Lincoln, Nebr., April 23 (AP).—For the "ungentlemanly" act of scrapping outside as well as inside the ring, King Kong Cox, of Hodi, Calif., and Bull Martin, of Boston, professional wrestlers, were suspended indefinitely today by L. B. Hokuf, State athletic director.

He said the wrestlers rolled out of the ring at Omaha Monday night, and continued pounding each other. The referee disqualified both of them, and neither appeared when Hokuf called them for a hearing on charges of "ungentlemanly conduct."

Detton Tosses Koverly at Arena

By George Considine.

Wild George Koverly found someone who set him back on his heels last night. Goody! Goody! The rowdy ruffian extraordinaire succumbed to Dean Detton's rather artistic bow-and-arrow flying tackle in the 26-minute feature of the weekly Turner Arena wrestling show. More than 2,000 spectators attended.

As was to be expected, the match proved a fast and quite furious exhibition, abounding with strangles, uppercuts, gymnastics, struggles at the ringside and all the other hokum which goes to make up this strange, strange sport called rassling.

Koverly came to the rostrum equipped with several rolls of adhesive tape around his right wrist and Detton's work became apparent. The idea, as suggested by the customers, was to take off that tape.

Pulls Scraping Act.

But before that delicate function could be performed, wild Georgie made quite a practice of scraping the taped wrist across Detton's eyes, thus apparently blinding the fair-haired boy. Adding insult to injury, to kern a phrase, Koverly then would clamp on his Sunday strangle.

Thoroughly aroused over the sitchyashun, Detton grabbed the rollicking rough-houser and flung him into the radio equipment. A moment later Koverly found himself draped undignifiedly over the press bench on the opposite side of the mat.

The end came about in typically dramatic fashion. Koverly had delivered several uppercuts and kicks to the solar plexus, causing Detton to flee to the ringside. When George made motions to come out and get him, Dangerous Dan took hold of the middle rope and shot himself at Koverly's midsection in bow-and-arrow fashion. And that was that.

The season's high mark for humor, pantomime and entertainment was reached as King Kong Kashey, Abe Goldberg and Referee Cyclone Burns committed an hilarious half-hour draw.

Leering Len Hall threw Rusty Westcoatt with a French harp in 24 minutes and Sailor (Turtledove) Billings and Jack (Peaches) Hader worked to an enthusiastic 30-minute draw.

'No Implications' In Use of Name, Says Cordell Hull

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday pointed out that the use of his name and the name of the President, on the letterheads of the American Olympic Committee, carried "no international political implication." At the same time, Secretary Hull failed to answer a pointed question as to whether he had ever accepted the position as honorary vice president of the American Olympic Association, as described on the letterheads.

"I think that everyone is familiar with the fact that for many years in a limited number of cases members of the Cabinet, sometimes the President himself, have allowed the use of their names as honorary members of organizations which have as their object, for example, the promotion of the general cause of peace, or international sports. That naturally carried with it no political consideration or implication of any kind.

"Acceptance of such honorary appointments in the American Olympic Association by the President and certain members of the Cabinet has been customary, has always been considered as in the interest of international sport and, of course, carries no international political implication."

Besides Secretary Hull, the President and Secretaries of War and of the Navy are named on the letterhead as honorary officials.

Royer Yields 1 Hit To Beat Hamilton

The finest pitching performance of the young sandlot season was written in the books yesterday by red-headed Connie Royer, youthful right-hander of the National Metropolitan Bank nine. Royer hurled one-hit ball to shut out Hamilton National Bank, 5 to 0, and put Metropolitan in a tie for first place in the Bankers League.

In the league's other game, City Bank tacked a 12-7 defeat on Union Trust to go into a four-way tie with Metropolitan, National Savings and American Security and Trust for the lead.

Eastern Smashes Out 17-9 Victory

Eastern High's faculty for mass production in run-making was again much in evidence yesterday as the Lincoln Parkers pounded three Washington-Lee High pitchers for 21 hits, to win a 17-9 victory at Ballston, Va.

Coach Charlie Guyon of Eastern used 20 players, starting his second team. Catcher Wes Taylor, George Clinton, second baseman, and Centerfielder Lamb each connected for three hits, but the only perfect day at bat went to Taylor.

The hard-hitting receiver connected for two singles and a homer in three trips to the plate. Herb Barton, Eastern's first baseman, also drove out a four-bagger.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent

Stocks Break Sharply on Heavy Selling Attack Which Swamps Stock Exchange Facilities.

New York, April 23.—On a trading volume lifted to over 2,000,000 shares on two heavy selling drives, the stock market gave way in a fashion to suggest a climax to the decline. From 3 to 12 points were shot away from the leading issues, most of the pressure falling upon the moderate to high-priced stocks. Prices rallied mildly and the activity died down in the closing half hour, but no strength developed. Bonds were also weak, as were commodities. May wheat closed a cent lower at 100⅝ cents a bushel.

Uncovering of exceedingly thin markets for stock after stock, as has been done for the past week or ten days, has had the cumulative effect of inducing timid traders whose margins are none too secure to sell while there is yet time. Such a situation also is an invitation to the bear to try his hand at short selling. It can only be repeated that no fundamental change has occurred in the principal forces which govern stock prices in the long run, but the bull market, having lost its momentum, is difficult to start on the side of a hill.

Going Off Gold.

A good deal of talk is again heard on the subject of abandonment of the gold standard by France, but it is difficult to say how much of a market influence the fear or hope of such a step is likely to be. In well-informed quarters the most definite opinion on the matter is that one guess is about as good as another; that the French will stay on or go off gold when, as and if they feel they have the most to gain by so doing. In any event, nothing is likely to be done before the general elections to be held the coming Sunday and the following one.

If gold is abandoned by the simple process of forbidding further export of the metal and the exchange of paper francs for gold, no great effect on world markets is likely to take place, even though, as anticipated, Holland and Switzerland follow the French example If, on the other hand, definitive devaluation of the franc is immediately undertaken, it is probable that before long a repatriation of European capital will take place. That would tend to bring some liquidation in our security markets, for a good deal of gold has come here from Europe, particularly from France, representing a flight of capital from devalution.

On that score most people on this side think that the French, if they go off gold, are more than likely to stand by for a while to see what happens, before they set a definite value at which francs will be returned to gold. One government, for instance, could take the onus of abandoning gold and another would then have the logical task of revaluing the currency made necessary by a term of experience off gold. That period of waiting might last for some time and there would be little likelihood of any appreciable outward flow from this country of gold or liquidation of foreign investments in our markets while it endured.

Skating.

The ice continued in a dangerous condition for fancy skaters. Midland Steel Products was another stock to fall through an airhole. It dropped from 44 to 42 on a sale of 800 shares and then sank further, in spite of a good quarterly report and an optimistic, prediction of the company's president . . . Western Union opened 1¾ points lower at 88½. A bid and offer quotation of 83½@84½ was run on the ticker tape preceding the sale. Yesterday the stock broke from 85¼ to 84¼ on a block of 1,100 shares, but the price hardened toward the close . . . Chrysler climber above 100, but found the position slippery . . . General Motors acted as though it had discounted most of the facts on heavy April sales and the optimism shown by President Sloan for the remainder of the year . . . Certainteed Products preferred, which closed yesterday at 96½, opened on 180 shares at 95. The next sale was for 90 shares at 90, followed by a sale of 30 shares at 89¾. That short order drop of more than 16 points on a thimbleful of stock emphasized again the point that many stocks selling at high prices have only a handful of lethargic traders or investors waiting to buy them, now that the immediate future of prices is a little cloudy.

Protest.

The decision of the Federal Reserve Board to "terminate" as of April 3 the services of J. Herbert Case as chairman of the New York Reserve Bank, as well as those of several other Reserve bank chairmen, on somewhat tenuous grounds of economy, was shocking to the board of directors of the local bank. The New York board, acting on its own responsibility, addressed a letter to the Washington board, presumably protesting and asking for reconsideration. Mr. Case was drafted into the Reserve bank during the World War. He relinquished a job which had a future for one which, it now appears, had none other than a $3,600 annual pension which accrues to such an officer who has served 20 years. At their meeting this afternoon, directors of the local bank probably will have the board's reply to their communication.

Jobs in Sight.

Case probably will make known his plans in due course, and tears need not be shed over his loss of a job which, as Washington now views it, should be an honorary and payless one. It is no particular secret that the Reserve bank's chairman has been embarrassed more by the number than by the lack of excellent new jobs offered to him. The general idea seems to be that he would be foolish to work longer for a political body which has shown such little ability to appreciate a high-class banker.

Consolation.

A stockholder of one listed company has relieved his mind of the following opinion inscribed on a proxy form: "Must refuse to vote for the continuation of the present management after reading report. It seems to me to be an outrage on the stockholders to pay salaries to men who cannot manage the affairs of the company better. To do $30,000,000 business and lose 6.6 million is a tragedy; thank heaven you did not do $50,000,000 and lose $10,000,000."

Liverpool—Wheat futures eased today, closing ½ to ¾ lower owing to decided decreased demand for foreign wheat coupled with American and continental selling. Cotton futures held steady, scattered liquidation being absorbed by trade calling.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Slight improvement in the dollar price of French francs distinguished foreign exchange dealings yesterday.

The upturn in French francs in New York of .00¼ of a cent to 6.58⅜ was ascribed in banking circles to the narrowing of the old loss of the Bank of France.

New York trading on the pound sterling found that currency unchanged at $4.93⅜. In earlier London dealings the dollar had closed at 4.93½ to the pound.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

New York, April 23 (AP).—Steel prices unchanged.

Bank Balances $109,000,000 More in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported last night that member bank reserve balances increased $109,000,000 during the week ended April 22, bringing the total to about $2,640,000,000 in excess of legal requirements.

The upturn was occasioned by a re-transfer of $105,000,000 of Treasury cash from Reserve banks to commercial institutions, coupled with a return of $17,000,000 of money in circulation.

The inward flow of gold again continued normal during the week which witnessed an increase of $9,000,000 to stocks, bringing the total to $10,209,000,000.

The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended April 22, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,482,000,000, a decrease of $4,000,000 compared with the preceding week and an increase of $5,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1935.

"On April 22 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,475,000,000, a decrease of $2,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with decreases of $105,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $17,000,000 in money in circulation and an increase of $9,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by increases of $109,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $20,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts."

France Spurns German Plea For Colonies

'Out of Question' to Give Back Cameroons, Is Reply to Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 23.—Another angle of the Rhineland dispute between France and Germany was brought to the fore today when the French government officially announced a refusal to return a former German colony.

Adolf Hitler, after denouncing the Locarno Treaty and sending troops into the remilitarized Rhineland last month, made a discussion of the "colonial problem" one of the conditions of Germany's return to the League of Nations.

Observers are confident that Der Fuehrer at the time he thinks proper, will seek the return of some, if not all, of the colonial possessions lost in the World War.

Out of Question, Is Reply.

Louis Truitard, an official of the Ministry of Colonies, said in a radio speech that it is out of the question to return Cameroons, a French mandated territory in West Africa, to the Reich.

Truitard asserted that it was impossible to "expose the natives" of the Cameroons to a German "racial regime."

The official asserted the territory had prospered under French control and French spending, and that the native population had increased by 300,000 since the colony was taken from the Germans.

The French and Russian General Staffs will hold conferences next week to work out a closely-aligned plan for use in case of war with Germany. The conference follows the recent ratification of the mutual assistance pact between Moscow and Paris.

Fears are held in Paris that Gremany also plans aggression in Austria or Czechoslovakia.

Reich Plans "Memorial Day."

Berlin, April 23 (AP).—Germans interested in the colonial problem will meet tomorrow in numerous cities and towns to celebrate colonial Memorial Day.

The occasion will be the fifty-second anniversary of Chancellor Bismarck's declaration of German Southwest Africa as a German Protectorate. It was from that date that Germany's position as a colonial empire began, to be shattered by the World War.

Germany's cry for equality will never cease until the Reich has again become a colonial power, observers are agreed.

Unless all signs mislead, the demand for the restoration of colonies, taken from Germany by the Treaty of Versailles, will form the cornerstone of German foreign policy. Hitler might possibly content himself with territorial compensation elsewhere, but he will insist upon a "fair exchange" for territories lost in 1918.

Observers who have studied the technique of Hitler cannot fail to notice that the apparent suddenness of his action is always preceded by a careful campaign of preparing the German nation for the next instant of daring.

Observers foresee that the colonial issue is fast looming as one of the major problem for European statecraft.

Man Mauled by Lion Succumbs to Injuries

Augusta, Ga., April 23 (AP).—Olin F. Lazar, 32, died in a hospital here early today of injuries suffered yesterday when he was clawed by a lion caged at the home of Robert F. Meyer, of Aiken County (S. C.).

Meyer said Lazar unlocked a door leading to the pen surrounding the cage and that the 350-pound beast mauled him as he approached the bars.

on Addis Ababa is taking place from the Neghelli front through Alatta.

(This movement, if in progress, would bring three concerted drives on the Ethiopian capital: The first and major offensive from the north under Field Marshal Pietro Badoglio; the second from the southwest under Gen. Rodolfo Graziani, and the third from the southeast under an Italian commander at present not identified.)

A dispatch from the Stafani (Italian) News Agency reported the Ethiopians were refusing to obey instructions from the king of kings for a new mobilization.

The same dispatch says great dissension exists in Addis Ababa as to whether to resist the Italian advance or to surrender.

King Honors Rescuers.

Halifax, April 23 (AP).—King Edward complimented the rescue workers who saved Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from the Moose River gold mine, in a message cabled today to Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Ottawa.

The message, forwarded by Lord Tweedsmuir from Ottawa to Lieut. Gov. W. H. Covert of Nova Scotia, stated:

"I am thrilled with admiration for the heroism displayed by the gallant men who regardless of risk to their own lives effected the rescue of Dr. Robertson and Mr. Scadding from the Moose River mine. Please express to them my heartfelt congratulations on the success of their courageous efforts and my hope that they are not suffering any ill effects from the hardships they underwent. I should be glad to have further news of Dr. Robertson and Mr. Scadding. "EDWARD R. I."

The rescuers will receive gold medals from the Nova Scotia Legislature in acknowledgment of their bravery.

Canadians from Coast to Coast have contributed to a fund, already amounting to more than $12,000, to be distributed among the rescuers.

Physician Tells Court Reaguer Was Ill

either Wednesday or Thursday, so if you can possibly leave enough money with mama for the down payment on the car, or as much as you wish to pay, do. The first payment will be about $50. I won't be able to see you before then, and that will be the only chance that I will have to go to D. C.

"After they get the car, I will be able to see you real often. Will be ready to go either Wednesday or Thursday. Hope you will be able to get the money. Be good and think of me until I see you. Tonight is good 'ole' Monday night. Wish I could be with you. 'Bye, darling.'

"WILLIE."

Last Letter.

On October 9 her last letter to Reaguer said:

"Dear darling:

"Where on earth were you yesterday?

"I drove around, I know, 50 times. I wanted to see you so bad. I am tired of this married life."

"Could you possibly get the first payment on the car by tomorrow. It will be about $50. Herbert is going to sell his car, and I won't have any way to get up there to see you. If you don't give me another car, I won't have any way to get up there to see you.

"If you give me another car, I will leave it at home and mama can drive down and get me every evening. Please, darling, give me another car, 'cause you know I love you as much as ever. If you really want to see me you will do this at once.

"Mama is going to come to Washington tomorrow and if you give her the money, I will meet her in Fairfax and drive it back. Then I will be able to see you. This is the last time that I am going to ask you. I know you will do it for me, and I won't have to ask you any more. Hope to see you real soon, dear.

Love, always, Willie."

No sooner had O'Shea received permission to introduce the letters into evidence than Mrs. Bessie Reaguer, wife of the defendant, left the courtroom.

Tells of Friendship.

It was while Dr. Granville Easton, elderly Culpeper County physician and confidante of Reaguer, was on the stand that the letters were produced.

Dr. Easton, the typical country physician, most of whose practice until the past six years was among the farming folk of the Virginia truck country, was describing his friendship with Reaguer and his medical relations with him.

"I treated him," explained Dr. Easton, his face twitching nervously. He raised his hands and adjusted his tortoise-shell glasses.

Dr. Easton said he had attended Reaguer for several years after the highly respected Culpeper business leader had returned from the University Hospital in Charlottesville, Va., back in June, 1932.

Bearing out the testimony of three other physicians that Reaguer was suffering from hardening of the arteries of the brain and the heart, Dr. Easton looked concernedly at his patient as he said:

"I always tried to get him to keep quiet and to lie down and to take things easy."

"Did he ever talk to you about Willie Mae Fletcher?" asked O'Shea, rising from his chair and stalking toward the jury box.

For the Government, Goldstein objected, but Justice Luhring overruled him.

"Yes, he talked to me about Willie Mae," recalled the little doctor. "He and I certainly talked about Willie Mae. I told him to give Willie Mae up——"

Objects Again.

Goldstein again objected. Then he interposed:

"Did you talk to him about Willie Mae as a physician."

"Well, we were both Masons, and I talked to him both as a Mason and a physician," responded Dr. Easton.

Dr. Easton related how Reaguer would promise to forsake Willie Mae every time they talked, but that always he came back and said he could not forget her.

Earlier in his testimony, Dr. Easton brought out the fact that when Willie Mae Fletcher sold the last automobile he bought her and was about to be married, her undertaker lover said:

"I'm not resentful. He's a fine young man. I'm glad to get her off my hands. I gave her the car, and it was hers.

While O'Shea read the letters, Wood, in the courtroom, kept his gaze straight ahead, at the bench.

For several hours much of yesterday's testimony, offered by four physicians—Dr. Easton, Dr. O. K. Burnett and Dr. D. W. Kelly, of Culpeper, and Dr. H. B. Mulholland, of the University of Virginia Hospital—transformed the courtroom into a medical classroom.

Through the four physicians the defense developed the fact that William Reaguer, no longer young, suffered a clot on the brain on May 16, 1932. He was sent to Charlottesville and treated by Dr. Mulholland, who specializes in internal medicine and diagnosis.

Ever afterword, until Willie Mae Wood met her death, Reaguer was ill and the disease from which he suffered, all the physicians said, was arteriosclerosis.

Early yesterday the defense introduced an array of character witnesses. These included E. E. Johnson, town attorney; G. H. Miller, jr., bank cashier; Floyd White, bank cashier; the Rev. J. P. Edwards, Baptist minister; C. T. Gynn, a neighbor; the Rev. T. W. Cooper, Presbyterian minister; J. S. Thornton, insurance agent; C. E. Reams, jr., trial justice; Murphy Hoffman, a merchant, and Winfrey White, a merchant.

Each described Reaguer, who appeared to listen to them gratefully, as "having an excellent reputation for keeping the peace."

$50,000 Sought For Financing Safety Bureau

Roper Stresses Campaign to Help in Prevention of Accidents.

Funds totaling $50,000 to finance President Roosevelt's Accident Prevention Conference were sought yesterday by Commerce Secretary Daniel C. Roper, when he appeared before the House Interstate Commerce Committee and outlined the needs for funds, the prevalence of accidents and the activities of the conference.

Discusing the accident prevention bill under consideration by the committee, which had been introduced by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts, Secretary Roper said:

"This bill is, in my opinion, a very meritorious measure. It seeks to provide funds to meet current expenses, mostly of a clerical nature, of the Accident Prevention Conference, a group composed of patrotic citizens who are volunteering their time in behalf of accident prevention.

"This group was formed last December, when, at the request of the President, I called together some 500 men and women to consider ways and means of making life safer on land and sea and in the air.

Stresses Fund Need.

"These men," Roper continued, "are contributing their time in an effort to decrease accidents. Not one cent of the proposed appropriation would go to any of them in repayment of the money they are spending.

"The general committee and subcommittees now are carrying on to the best of their ability without an appropriation, but they are being greatly handicapped because of lack of funds. Inasmuch as I originally interested these outstanding men in giving gratuitously of their time and efforts to this movement, and the President, in an interview with the general committee, gave the members assurance that any plan they might evolve would have his fullest support, I feel a responsibility to do everything within my power to aid the committee in obtaining necessary funds.

Roper was emphatic in stating no new Government bureau would be set up from the funds.

Labert St. Clair, who was "lent" to Roper by Barron G. Collier, advertising executive, to conduct the affairs of the safety conference, told the House committee that the increase in accidents has become "appalling."

Moore Heads Committee.

He said last year accidental deaths on highways totaled more than 34,000; in homes, more than 36,000; in activities involving riding, swimming and walking, 15,000, and in industry, another 15,000.

Heretofore, St. Clair said, all expenses of the conference have been paid by individual members. He said an appropriation would greatly increase the effectiveness of the work.

Senator A. Harry Moore (Democrat), of New Jersey, is chairman of the general safety committee. Heads of committees in the organization include Senator Arthur Capper, Senator William G. McAdoo, Representative Emmet O'Neal, Kentucky; Henry H. Heiman, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men; Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Co.; W. Averill Harriman, of the Union Pacific Railroad Co.; John L. Lovett, manager of the Michigan Manufacturers Association; Dr. B. L. Corbett, executive secretary of the Milwaukee Safety Commission; Barron G. Collier, Fred M. Roseland, manager of the Newark Safety Council, and Walter Parker, economist.
